The following Extract of a Letter, addressed to the Consul for France at Singapore, by Mr. Magdalaine, an Officer of the Steamer "Duroe," of the French Imperial Navy, dated Sourabaya, 2nd October 1856, is published for general information :—

The position of the Mellish Shoal, which is about 160 Leagues N. West of New Calidonia, according to our observations after the wreck, differs sensibly from that given in the Charts. According to our observations it is in Latitude South 17° 23′ and Longitude East of Paris 153° 35′.

In South Latitude 16° 24 and Longitude East of Paris 147° 54′ I observed an Islet of Red Sand about a mile in circumference, and saw no Reef round it, but the Sea was exceedingly high.

In South Latitude 16° 36′ and Longitude East of Paris 145° 40′ I also observed a Reef, level with the water, appearing to have an interior lagoon with bluish water. I could not make out the extent of it, but it was several miles in circumference.

I hope you will find an early opportunity to publish these remarks on the Mellish Shoal, where I think a vessel might easily find anchorage. Capt. d'la Voisiere intended, after our departure, to make a survey of the Reef, which had an excellent entrance on the Western side.

Geological Museum,

IN CONNEXION WITH THE

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY OF INDIA,

HASTINGS' STREET, CALCUTTA.

THE Government of India having recently sanctioned a considerable extension of the "Museum of Economic Geology for India," which had for some years existed under the careful Superintendence of Mr. Piddington in connexion with the Asiatic Society of Bengal, the attention of all who may be interested in the study of Geology, and of all who may desire the internal improvement of this country, is solicited to the objects of this Institution; and their aid in the promotion of these objects is requested.

In the year 1840, a Museum of Economic Geology for India was established, under the sanction of the Honorable the Court of Directors. Its objects and aim were clearly set forth in a brief statement drawn up by Mr. Piddington, and freely circulated at the time. In conjunction with the Asiatic Society of Bengal, and in their Rooms, it grew into some importance, and gradually became the depository of many good and valuable specimens, illustrative of the mineral wealth of this country. But simultaneously with its growth, the Science of Geology itself was rapidly attaining its present development. All cognate Sciences were spreading their domain, and the results of investigations in each were becoming more widely and more largely known. Since then, also, the study of Mineralogy, of Geology, and of Chemistry, has been introduced as a part of the established course of Education, and the practical applications of these Sciences to Mining and to Engineering generally will soon be as regularly taught in this country as they have been for years past in Europe.

The extension of the Museum had become, therefore, essential, if it were to keep pace with the progress of knowledge, and to retain any of its value as a means and aid to instruction. With this view, the Right Hon'ble the Governor General in Council has given orders for the formation, on a much more extended scale than hitherto, of a general Geological Collection, with a special view to illustrate the geological structure, the mineral wealth, and the manufacturing resources of this Empire. A commodious house has been rented for the purpose at present, and it is intended that abundant accommodation shall be provided for the Museum in the new building for the University in Calcutta, when the Geological Collection will form a portion of the general Collections of Natural History to be connected with that establishment.

In the Museum now in progress of formation every thing tending to illustrate the Geology of this country, in its widest sense, will find a place. The history of the Science, the progress of its investigations, the nature of its classifications, the phenomena with which it is concerned, the laws of those phenomena, will all be illustrated. The grand series of organisms, the remains of which occur in such abundance in various deposits, will be exhibited, and the whole Natural History of rocks traced out, so far as collections enable this to be done. By the aid of Drawings, such objects as cannot be procured will be made familiar to the Student, and by the use of Maps, the structure of countries, which it would be impossible for many to visit, will be made known.

While thus endeavouring to render the Student acquainted with the principles of the Science, the practical applications of these principles will, at the same time, be fully exhibited. Mining processes, mining products, and the principal metallurgical operations, will also be included, and the comparative excellence of each, so far as possible, made known. The building materials of the Country, and their applications, the localities where used, the durability, the facility of working, the strength, &c., of the stones, will all be examined into. The importance of Mineral Waters must not be overlooked, and the value of these will be determined by careful investigations.

Further, in a country so essentially agricultural as India, the character of the soils and sub-soils, their peculiar adaptation to peculiar crops, their composition, and, in dependence upon this, the easiest means of renewing or increasing their fertility; all these are important questions which at once connect themselves with the researches of the Geologist, inasmuch as the natural powers of any soil depend essentially on the source from which that soil has been derived, and therefore on the geological structure of the district.

To enable such enquiries to be effectively carried out, a small Laboratory is attached to the Museum, where such analyses and investigations as may be requisite will be carried on; and it is hoped that most valuable, because accurate and detailed, information may thus be acquired.

Moreover, careful summaries of all existing knowledge on the geological structure of the Country, will be compiled and arranged, so as to facilitate reference. Much has been done in investigating the geological structure of this Country, and very valuable papers have been given to the public, descriptive of various parts of India. But these facts are scattered through various periodicals, are often only incidentally noticed in travels, or can be found only in manuscript among the Records of Public Offices. Many of these are with difficulty intelligible, from the writers frequently calling similar objects by different names, or vice versâ. It is, therefore, necessary to obtain the key to the terms used before these can be compared. It will be an object with the Officers of the Geological Survey to remove this difficulty, and to bring into an accessible form every thing which has been published bearing on the geological structure, the mineral wealth, or the manufacturing industry (so far as this is concerned with mineral products) of this Empire.

The Museum of Geology has been placed in connexion with, and under the same superintendence as, the Geological Survey of India. By this means opportunities will be afforded of procuring a very perfect series of the rocks, fossils, and minerals of the districts visited by that Survey. But the aid of all is solicited in completing such local collections as may illustrate the structure of the several districts. Every one will be able to contribute something of value. Those permanently resident in any locality have infinitely greater advantages and facilities for procuring good illustrations of its mineral structure and products than any visitor could enjoy, and from such we confidently look for much that will prove of great interest and of great value. Every thing which can, in any way, tend to illustrate the rocks, the fossils, the minerals, or the practical applications of these will prove interesting.

Regarding the nature and properties of all specimens forwarded, the fullest information will be freely afforded, on application to the Curator of the Museum. Organic remains will be examined, and, so far as possible, carefully named for contributors, and every facility given for the investigation of any particular subject or any particular line of research connected with Geology.

The formation of a Library of reference, in connection with the Museum, has been sanctioned, and has already made considerable progress. Under proper restrictions, this will be accessible to all Students of Geology, and others interested in such enquiries.

Catalogues of the several departments of the Museum will be issued from time to time. Public Officers, and other persons in all parts of India, are requested to send contributions. All specimens, carefully packed, may be forwarded by the safest and most economical mode of conveyance, addressed to

THE MUSEUM OF GEOLOGY,
No. 1, HASTINGS' STREET,
Calcutta.

And it is requested that a communication stating fully the wishes of the donors may, at the same time, be forwarded by post to

THE DIRECTOR OF THE MUSEUM OF GEOLOGY,
No. 1, HASTINGS' STREET,

Rules for Admission of Public, &c.

The Museum will be open daily, excepting Sundays, from 10 o'clock A. M to 6 P M

ADMISSION FREE.

VISITORS are requested to enter their names, and number of party, in a Book provided for that purpose.

The attendants in the Museum are strictly forbidden to speak to, or interfere with visitors in any way, excepting for the protection of the Museum and its contents.

It is particularly requested, that any irregularity or want of civility may be reported at once to the Curator of the Museum.

The collections being exposed for public benefit, it is confidently hoped that the public will feel the importance of carefully preserving what conduces to their instruction and advantage, and will therefore aid the Officers of the Museum in the discharge of their duty

Students of Geology, or persons desirous of information on any special point, are requested to apply to the Curator at the Museum on Tuesdays and Saturdays, between the hours of twelve and four. In particular cases, this aid wil be afforded at any time; but as it is essential that the Officers in charge of the Museum should be able to devote much of their attention to the arrangement of the collections, to the examination of specimens, and to the general duties of their Office, it is hoped that the public will aid in these objects by not interrupting them, under ordinary circumstances, at other times than those fixed above.

Gentlemen interested in geological pursuits mines, &c., in special agricultural objects, or in the use of new or untried building materials, &c., who may desire detailed examination of any mineral substance, or definite information for a special object, are requested to apply by letter (post paid) addressed to the Director of the Museum of Geology, 1, Hastings' Street, Calcutta, stating as clearly as possible their wishes. All such communications will be attended to at the earliest possible opportunity, and in the order of their receipt.

Visitors and others are requested to contribute to the Collections every thing which may appear interesting, or locally peculiar.

The servants of the Museum are prohibited, under pain of instant dismissal, from asking for, or receiving, any gratuity whatever, and it is hoped that none may be offered.

The Museum will be open from the 1st day of January 1857.

Tenth. Every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep, or expend any property on behalf of Government, or to make any survey, assessment, or contract, on behalf of Government, or to execute any revenue process, or to investigate, or to report, on any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of Government, or to make, authenticate, or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of Government, or to prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of Government; and every officer appointed by, or in the service or pay of Government;

Illustration.

A Municipal Commissioner is a public servant.

Explanation 1. Persons falling under any of the above descriptions are public servants, whether appointed by the Government or not.

Explanation 2. Wherever the words "public servant" occur, they shall be understood of every person who is in actual possession of the situation of a public servant, whatever legal defect there may be in his right to hold that situation.

"Moveable property."

18. The words "moveable property" are intended to include corporeal property of every description, except land and things attached to the earth or permanently fastened to any thing which is attached to the earth.

"Wrongful gain."

19. "Wrongful gain" is gain, by unlawful means, of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled.

"Wrongful loss."

"Wrongful loss" is the loss, by unlawful means, of property to which the person losing it is legally entitled.

Wrongful retention

A person is said to gain wrongfully when such person retains wrongfully, as well as when such person acquires wrongfully. A person is said to lose wrongfully when such person is wrongfully kept out of any property, as well as when such person is wrongfully deprived of property.

Wrongful detention.

"Fraudulently."

20. Whoever does any thing with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss or risk of wrongful loss to another person, is said to do that thing "fraudulently."

Property in possession of wife, clerk, or servant.

21. When property is in the possession of a person's wife, clerk, or servant, in trust for that person, it is in that person's possession; and not in the possession of his wife, clerk, or servant within the meaning of this Code.

Explanation. A person employed temporarily or on a particular occasion in the capacity of a clerk or servant, is a clerk or servant within the meaning of this Clause.

"Counterfeit."

22. A person is said to "counterfeit," who causes one thing to resemble another thing, intending by means of that resemblance to practise deception, or knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practised.

Explanation. It is not essential to counterfeiting that the imitation should be exact.

"Document"

23. The word "document" denotes any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures, or marks, or by one or more of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, as evidence of that matter.

Explanations 1. It is immaterial by what means or upon what substance the letters, figures, or marks are formed, or whether the evidence is intended for, or may be used in, a Court of Justice, or not.

Illustrations.

A writing expressing the terms of a contract may be used as evidence of the contract. It is therefore a document.

A Cheque upon a Banker is a document.

A Power of Attorney is a document.

A Map or Plan is a document.

A writing containing directions or instructions is a document.

Explanation 2. Whatever is expressed by means of letters, figures, or marks as explained by Mercantile or other usage, shall be deemed to be expressed by such letters, figures, or marks within the meaning of this Clause, although the same may not be actually expressed.

Illustration.

A writes his name on the back of a Bill of Exchange payable to his order. The meaning of the endorsement, as explained by Mercantile usage, is that the Bill is to be paid to the holder. The endorsement is a document, and must be construed in the same manner as if the words "pay to the holder" or words to that effect had been written over the signature.

"Valuable security."

24. The words "valuable security" denote a document which is, or purports to be, a document whereby any legal right is created, extended, transferred, restricted, extinguished, or released, or whereby any person acknowledges that he lies under legal liability, or has not a certain legal right.

Illustration.

A writes his name on the back of a Bill of Exchange. As the effect of this endorsement is to transfer the right to the Bill to any person who may become the lawful holder of it, the endorsement is a "valuable security."

"A Will."

25. The words "a will" denote any testamentary document.

Words referring to acts to include illegal omissions.

26. In every part of this Code except where a contrary intention appears from the context, words which refer to acts done extend also to illegal omissions.

Act, whether done directly or indirectly, is equally an offence.

27. Whenever the doing of any particular thing is an offence, it is an offence to do that thing either directly or indirectly.

"Act."
"Omission."

28. The word "act" denotes as well a series of acts as a single act: the word "omission" denotes as well a series of omissions as a single omission.

Effect caused partly by act, and partly by omission.

29. Wherever the causing of a certain effect, or an attempt to cause that effect, by an act or by an omission, is an offence, it is to be understood that the causing of that effect partly by an act and partly by an omission is the same offence.

Illustration.

A intentionally causes Z's death, partly by illegally omitting to give Z food, and partly by beating Z. A has committed murder.

"Voluntarily."

30. A person is said to cause an effect "voluntarily," when he causes it by means whereby he intended to cause it, or by means which, at the time of employing those means, he knew or had reason to believe to be likely to cause it.

Illustration.

A sets fire, by night, to an inhabited house in a large town, for the purpose of facilitating a robbery, and thus causes the death of a person. Here, A may not have intended to cause death, and may even be sorry that death has been caused by his act; yet, if he knew that he was likely to cause death, he has caused death voluntarily.

"Offence"

31. The word "offence" denotes a thing made punishable by this Code.

"Special law."

32. A "special law" is a law applicable to a particular subject.

"Local law."

33. A "local law" is a law applicable only to a particular part of British India.

"Illegal."

34. The word "illegal" is applicable to every thing which is an offence, or which is contrary to any direction of the law, or which furnishes ground for a civil action: and a person is said to be "legally bound to do" whatever it is illegal in him to omit.

"Injury."

35. The word "injury" denotes any harm whatever illegally caused to any person in body, mind, reputation, or property.

"Life."

36. The word "life" denotes the life of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

"Death."

37. The word "death" denotes the death of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

"Animal."

38. The word "animal" denotes any living creature, other than a human being.

"Vessel."

39. The word "vessel" denotes any thing made for the conveyance by water of human beings, or of property.

"Year."

40. Wherever the word "year" or the word "month" is used, it is to be understood that the year or the month is to be reckoned according to the British Calendar.

"Clause."

41. The word "Clause" denotes one of those portions of a Chapter of this Code which are distinguished by prefixed numeral figures.

"Herein-before." "Herein-after."

42. The word "herein-before" and the word "herein-after" relate to matter contained within the same Clause in which these words occur.

"Oath."

43. The word "oath" includes a solemn affirmation substituted by law for an oath, and any declaration required or authorized by law to be made before a public servant or to be used for the purpose of proof, whether in a Court of Justice or not.

Definition not to be limited by the title of the Chapter containing it.

44. Nothing which falls within any definition of an offence shall be construed as not being an offence, because it does not fall within the title of the Chapter containing that definition.

"Good faith."

45. Nothing is said to be done or believed in good faith, which is done or believed without due care and attention.

Chapter III.

OF PUNISHMENTS.

Punishments.

1. The punishments to which offenders are liable under the provisions of this Code are,

First.—Death;

Secondly,—Transportation

Thirdly,—Imprisonment, which is of two descriptions, namely:

(1.) Rigorous, that is, with hard labor;

(2.) Simple.

Fourthly.—Banishment from the territories in the possession and under the Government of the East India Company;

Fifthly,—Forfeiture of property;

Sixthly,—Fine.

Commutation of sentence of death.

2. In every case in which sentence of death shall have been passed, the Government of India or the local Government of the place within which the offender shall have been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for any other punishment provided by this Code.

Commutation of sentence of transportation for life.

3. In every case in which sentence of transportation for life has been passed, the Government of India or the local Government of the place within which the offender has been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for imprisonment of either description which may extend to fourteen years, or for banishment from the territories in the possession and under the Government of the East India Company, which may be for life, or for any term.

Remission of punishment.

4. In every case the Government of India or the local Government of the place within which an offender has been sentenced may, at any time, remit the whole or any part of the punishment, without conditions, or upon any conditions to which the offender has agreed.

Sentence of imprisonment, rigorous or simple.

5. In every case in which it is provided that an offender shall be punished with imprisonment of either description, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct in the sentence that such imprisonment shall be wholly rigorous, or that such imprisonment shall be wholly simple, or that any part of such imprisonment shall be rigorous and the rest simple.

Sentence of forfeiture of property.

6. In every case in which an offender is sentenced to forfeiture of all property, the sentence renders that offender incapable of acquiring any property except for the benefit of the Government.

Illustration.

A, for waging war against the Government of India, is sentenced to forfeiture of all his property. After the sentence A's father dies, leaving an estate which, but for the sentence of forfeiture, would become the property of A. The estate becomes the property of Government.

Amount of fine.

7. Where no sum is expressed to which a fine may extend, the amount of fine to which the offender is liable is unlimited.

Sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine.

8. In every case in which an offender is sentenced to a fine, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct by the sentence that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall suffer imprisonment for a certain term, which imprisonment shall be in excess of any other imprisonment to which he may have been sentenced, or to which he may be liable under a commutation of a sentence.

* As to cases in which penal servitude must be substituted for transportation, see Act XXIV of 1855.

9. The term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned, in default of payment of a fine, shall not exceed one-fourth of the term of imprisonment which is the maximum fixed for the offence, if the offence be punishable with imprisonment as well as fine.

Limit of term of imprisonment for default in payment of fine, when the offence is punishable with imprisonment, as well as fine.

10. The imprisonment which the Court imposes in default of payment of a fine may be of any description to which the offender might have been sentenced for the offence.

Description of imprisonment for such default.

11. If the offence be punishable with fine only, the term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned, in default of payment of fine, shall not exceed the following scale, that is to say, for any term not exceeding two months when the amount of the fine shall not exceed fifty Rupees, and for any term not exceeding four months when the amount shall not exceed one hundred Rupees, and for any term not exceeding six months in any other case.

Term of imprisonment for default in payment of fine, when the offence is punishable with fine only.

12. The imprisonment which is imposed in default of payment of a fine shall terminate whenever that fine is either paid or levied by process of law.

Such imprisonment to terminate upon payment of the fine.

13. If, before the expiration of the term of imprisonment fixed in default of payment, such a proportion of the fine be paid or levied that the term of imprisonment suffered in default of payment is not less than proportional to the part of the fine still unpaid, the imprisonment shall terminate.

Termination of such imprisonment upon payment of proportional part of fine.

Illustration.

A is sentenced to a fine of one hundred Rupees, and to four months' imprisonment in default of payment. Here, if seventy-five Rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of one month of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the first month has expired. If seventy-five Rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of the first month, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged. If fifty Rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of two months of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the two months are completed. If fifty Rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of those two months, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged.

14. The fine, or any part thereof which remains unpaid, may be levied at any time within six years after the passing of the sentence, and if, under the sentence, the offender be liable to imprisonment for a longer period than six years, then at any time previous to the expiration of that period; and the death of the offender does not discharge from the liability any property which would, after his death, be legally liable for his debts.

Fine may be levied within 6 years or at any time during the term of imprisonment.

Death of offender not to discharge his property from liability.

15. Whenever any person, by doing any thing whereby he commits an offence falling under one penal provision of this Code, also commits an offence under another penal provision of this Code, the punishment shall not be cumulative, unless it be so expressly provided.

Punishment of offence falling under more than one penal provision of Code not to be cumulative unless expressly so provided.

Illustration.

A strikes Z with violence knowing it to be likely that he may thereby break Z's arm, and does break Z's arm. Here A commits an assault. He also by the same act commits the offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt. But A is not liable to punishment both for assault, and for voluntarily causing grievous hurt.

16. Where it is provided that punishment shall be cumulative, that provision does not authorize the combining, in any case, of the punishments provided by more than two penal provisions of this Code.

Provision for cumulative punishment does not authorize a combination of punishments.

17. Where anything which is an offence is made up of parts, any of which parts is itself an offence, the offender shall not be punished with the imprisonment for more than one of such his offences, unless it be so expressly provided.

Limit of punishment of offence which is made up of several offences.

Illustrations.

(a) A gives Z fifty strokes with a stick. Here A may have committed the offence of voluntarily causing hurt to Z by the whole beating, and also by each of the blows which make up the whole beating. If A were liable to punishment for every blow, he might be imprisoned for fifty years, one for each blow. But he is liable only to one punishment for the whole beating, that is to say, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, if the hurt which he has voluntarily caused is not grievous; and for a term not exceeding ten years, if the hurt which he has voluntarily caused is grievous.

(b) But if, while A is beating Z, Y interferes, and A strikes Y. here, as the blow given to Y is no part of the act whereby A voluntarily causes hurt to Z, A is liable to one punishment for voluntarily causing hurt to Z, and to another for the blow given to Y.

18. In all cases in which judgment is given that a person is guilty of one of several offences specified in the judgment, but that it is doubtful of which of these offences he is guilty, the offender shall be punished for the offence for which the lowest punishment is provided if the same punishment is not provided for all.

Punishment of a person found guilty of one of several offences, (the judgment stating that it is doubtful of which.)

19. Whenever any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Code with imprisonment of either description, the Court may, by its sentence, order that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of the imprisonment to which he is sentenced, not exceeding six months in the whole or one month at a time, or three months in any one year.

Solitary confinement.

20. Whenever any person, convicted of any offence punishable under this Code with imprisonment of either description for a term of five years or upwards, shall have been previously convicted, whether before or after the passing of this Code, of any offence for which by the law then in force he was liable to imprisonment for a term of five years or upwards, he shall be subject to transportation for life or to double the amount of punishment to which he would otherwise have been liable; provided that he shall not in any case be liable to imprisonment for a term exceeding fourteen years.

Punishment of person convicted, after a previous conviction, of an offence punishable with five years' imprisonment.

Chapter IV.

GENERAL EXCEPTIONS.

1. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is or who by reason of a mistake of fact and not by reason of a mistake of law in good faith believes himself to be bound by law to do it.

Act done by a person bound, or by mistake of fact believing himself bound by law.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a soldier, fires on a mob by the order of his superior officer, in conformity with the commands of the law. A has committed no offence.

(b) A, an officer of a Court of Justice, being ordered by that Court to arrest Y, and, after due inquiry, believing Z to be Y, arrests Z. A has committed no offence.

Act of Judge when acting judicially.

2. Nothing is an offence which is done by a Judge when acting judicially in the exercise of any power which is, or which in good faith he believes to be given to him by law.

Act done by a person justified, or by mistake of fact believing himself justified by law.

3. Nothing is an offence which is done by any person who is justified by law, or who by reason of a mistake of fact and not by reason of a mistake of law, in good faith, believes himself to be justified by law in doing it.

Illustration.

A sees Z commit what appears to A to be a murder. A, in the exercise, to the best of his judgment, exerted in good faith, of the power which the law gives to all persons of apprehending murderers in the fact, seizes Z, in order to bring Z before the proper authorities. A has committed no offence, though it may turn out that Z was acting in self defence.

Accident in the doing of a lawful act.

4. Nothing is an offence which is done by accident or misfortune and without any criminal intention or knowledge in the doing of a lawful act in a lawful manner by lawful means and with proper care and caution.

Illustration.

A is at a work with a hatchet; the head flies off and kills a man who is standing by. Here, if there was no want of proper caution on the part of A, his act is excusable and not an offence.

Act likely to cause harm but done without a criminal intent and to prevent other harm.

5. Nothing is an offence merely by reason of its being done with the knowledge that it is likely to cause harm, if it be done without any criminal intention to cause harm, and in good faith for the purpose of preventing or avoiding other harm to person or property.

Explanation.—It is a question of fact in such a case whether the harm to be prevented or avoided was of such a nature and so imminent as to justify or excuse the risk of doing the act with the knowledge that it was likely to cause harm.

Illustrations.

(a) A, the Captain of a Steam Vessel, suddenly and without any fault or negligence on his part, finds himself in such a position that, before he can stop his vessel, he must inevitably run down a boat B with 20 or 30 passengers on board, unless he changes the course of his vessel, and that, by changing his course, he must incur risk of running down a boat C with only 2 passengers on board, which he may possibly clear. Here, if A alters his course without any intention to run down the boat C and in good faith for the purpose of avoiding the danger to the passengers in the boat B, he is not guilty of an offence, though he may run down the boat C by doing an act which he knew was likely to cause that effect, if it be found as a matter of fact that the danger which he intended to avoid was such as to excuse him in running the risk of running down C.

(b) A in a great fire pulls down houses in order to prevent the conflagration from spreading. He does this with the intention and good faith of saving human life or property. Here, if it be found that the harm to be prevented was of such a nature and so imminent as to excuse A's act, A is not guilty of the offence.

Act done pursuant to the judgment or order of a Court of Justice.

6. Nothing which is done in pursuance of, or which is warranted by the judgment or order of a Court of Justice, if done whilst such judgment or order remains in force, is an offence, notwithstanding the Court may have had no jurisdiction to pass such judgment or order, provided the person doing the act, in good faith, believes that the Court had such jurisdiction.

Act of a child under 7 years of age.

7. Nothing is an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

Act of a child above 7 and under 12 years of age who has not sufficient maturity of understanding.

8. Nothing is an offence which is done by child above seven years of age and under twelve, who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct on that occasion.

Act of a person of unsound mind.

9. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, by reason of unsoundness of mind, is incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong, or contrary to law.

Act of a person incapable of judgment by reason of intoxication caused against his will.

10. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, is, by reason of intoxication, incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong, or contrary to law; provided that the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

A particular intent when part of an offence, may be presumed when the offender is intoxicated, unless he has been made so against his will.

11. In cases where an act done is not an offence unless done with a particular knowledge or intent, the same presumption of knowledge or intent shall be made against a person doing the act in a state of intoxication, as would have been made if he had not been intoxicated, unless the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

Act not intended and not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent.

12. Nothing which is not intended to cause death, or grievous hurt, and which is not known by the doer to be likely to cause death, or grievous hurt, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, to any person above eighteen years of age, who has given consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm; or by reason of any harm which it may be known by the doer to be likely to cause to any such person who has consented to take the risk of that harm.

Illustration.

A and Z agree to fence with each other for amusement. This agreement implies the consent of each to suffer any harm which, in the course of such fencing, may be caused without foul play; and if A, while playing fairly, hurts Z, A commits no offence.

Act not intended to cause death done by consent in good faith for the benefit of a person.

13. Nothing, which is not intended to cause death, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to any person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, and who has given a consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm, or to take the risk of that harm.

Illustration.

A, a surgeon, knowing that a particular operation is likely to cause the death of Z, who suffers under a painful complaint, but not intending to cause Z's death, and intending, in good faith, Z's benefit, performs that operation on Z, with Z's consent. A has committed no offence.

Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or person of unsound mind by or by consent of guardian.

14. Nothing which is done in good faith for the benefit of a person under twelve years of age, or of unsound mind, by or by consent of the guardian or other person having lawful charge of that person, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to that person: Provided—

Provisoes.

First. That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or to the attempting to cause death:

Secondly. That this exception shall not extend to the doing of any thing which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity.

Thirdly. That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of grievous hurt, or to the attempting to cause grievous hurt, unless it be for the purpose of preventing death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity.

Fourthly. That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a parent, whips his child moderately, for the child's benefit. A is within the exception, and therefore has committed no offence.

(b) A, in good faith, for his daughter's benefit, intentionally kills her to prevent her from falling into the hands of Pindarries. A is not within the exception, and is therefore guilty of an offence.

(c) A, in good faith, for his child's benefit, without his child's consent, has his child cut for the stone by a surgeon, knowing it to be likely that the operation will cause the child's death, but not intending to cause the child's death. A is within the exception, inasmuch as his object was the cure of the child.

Consent known to be given under fear or misconception.

15. A consent is not such a consent as is intended by Clauses 12, 13, and 14 of this Chapter, or any other Clause of this Code, if the consent is given by a person under fear of injury or under a misconception of fact, and if the person doing the act knows, or has reason to believe, that the consent was given in consequence of such fear or misconception—Or Consent of a child or person of unsound mind.

If the consent is given by a person who is under seven years of age, or who, from immaturity of understanding, unsoundness of mind, or intoxication, is unable to understand the nature and consequence of that to which he gives his consent.

Acts which are offences independently of harm caused to the person consenting, are not within the exceptions in Clauses 12, 13, and 14.

16. The exceptions in Clauses 12, 13, and 14, of this Chapter, do not extend to acts which are offences independently of any harm which they may cause, or be intended to cause, or be known to be likely to cause, to the person giving the consent, or on whose behalf the consent is given.

Illustration.

Causing miscarriage (unless caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the woman) is an offence independently of harm which it may cause or be intended to cause to the woman. Therefore it is not an offence "by reason of such harm;" and the consent of the woman or of her guardian to the causing of such miscarriage does not justify the act.

Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent.

17. Nothing is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause to a person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, even without that person's consent, if the circumstances are such that it is impossible for that person to signify consent, or if that person is incapable of giving consent, and has no guardian or other person in lawful charge of him from whom it is possible to obtain consent in time for the thing to be done with benefit. Provided—

Provisoes.

First. That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or attempting to cause death.

Secondly. That this exception shall not extend to the doing of any thing which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity.

Thirdly. That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of hurt, or to the attempting to cause hurt, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or hurt.

Fourthly. That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

Illustrations.

(a.) Z is thrown from his horse, and is insensible. A a surgeon, finds that Z requires to be trepanned. A, not intending Z's death, but in good faith, for Z's benefit, performs the trepan before Z recovers his power of judging for himself. A has committed no offence.

(b) Z is carried off by a tiger. A fires at the tiger knowing it to be likely that the shot may kill Z, but not intending to kill Z, and in good faith intending Z's benefit. A's ball gives Z a mortal wound. A has committed no offence.

(c) A, a surgeon, sees a child suffer an accident which is likely to prove fatal unless an operation be immediately performed. There is not time to apply to the child's guardian. A performs the operation in spite of the entreaties of the child, intending, in good faith, the child's benefit. A has committed no offence.

(d) A is in a house which is on fire, with Z, a child. People below hold out a blanket. A drops the child from the house-top, knowing it to be likely that the fall may kill the child, but not intending to kill the child, and intending, in good faith, the child's benefit. Here, even if the child is killed by the fall, A has committed no offence.

Explanation.—Mere pecuniary benefit is not benefit within the meaning of Clauses 13, 14, and 17.

Communication made in good faith.

18. No communication made in good faith is an offence by reason of any harm to the person to whom it is made.

Illustration.

A, a surgeon, in good faith, communicates to a patient his opinion that he cannot live. The patient dies in consequence of the shock. A has committed no offence, though he knew it to be likely that the communication might cause the patient's death.

Act to which a person is compelled by threats.

19. Excepting murder and offences against the State punishable with death, nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is compelled to do it by threats, which, at the time of doing it, reasonably cause the apprehension that instant death to that person will otherwise be the consequence; provided the person doing the act did not of his own accord, or from a reasonable apprehension of harm to himself short of instant death, place himself in the situation by which he became subject to such constraint.

Explanation 1.—A person who, of his own accord, or by reason of a threat of being beaten, joins a gang of dacoits, or a crew of pirates, or the like, knowing their character, is not entitled to the benefit of this exception, on the ground of his having been compelled by his associates to do any thing that is an offence by law.

Explanation 2.—A person who embarks ignorantly in a piratical vessel, being compelled by the crew, by threat of instant death, to join in an act of piracy, is entitled to the benefit of the exception.

Explanation 3.—So also is a person seized by a gang of dacoits, and forced, by threat of instant death, to do a thing which is an offence by law; for example, a smith compelled to take his tools and to force the door of a house for the dacoits to enter and plunder it.

Act causing slight harm.

20. Nothing is an offence by reason that it causes, or that it is intended to cause, or that it is known to be likely to cause, any harm, if that harm is so slight that no person of ordinary sense and temper would complain of such harm.

Of the Right of Private Defence.

Act done in private defence.

21. Nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence.

Right of private defence.

22. Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in Clause 24, to defend:

First. His own body, and the body of any other person, against an assault.

Secondly. The property, whether moveable or immoveable, of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling under the definition of theft, robbery, mischief, or criminal trespass, or which is an attempt to commit theft, robbery, mischief, or criminal trespass.

Right of private defence against the act of a person of unsound mind, &c.

23. When an act which would otherwise be a certain offence, is not that offence by reason of the youth, the want of maturity of understanding, the unsoundness of mind, or the intoxication of the person doing that act, or by reason of any misconception on the part of that person, every person has the same right of private defence against that act which he would have if the act were that offence.

Illustrations.

(a) Z, under the influence of madness, attempts to kill A. Z is guilty of no offence. But A has the same right of private defence which he would have if Z were sane.

(b) A enters by night a house which he is legally entitled to enter. Z, in good faith, taking A for a house-breaker, attacks A. Here Z, by attacking A under this misconception, commits no offence. But A has the same right of private defence against Z, which he would have if Z were acting under no misconception.

Acts against which there is no right of private defence.

24. There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that act may not be strictly justifiable by law.

There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that direction may not be strictly justifiable by law.

There is no right of private defence in cases in which there is time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.

Extent to which the right may be exercised.

The right of private defence in no case extends to the inflicting of more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence.

Explanation 1.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant, as such, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is such public servant.

Explanation 2.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is acting by such direction, or unless such person states the authority under which he acts, or, if he has authority in writing, unless he produces such authority.

When the right of private defence of the body extends to causing death.

25. The right of private defence of the body extends, under the restrictions mentioned in the last preceding Clause, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the assailant, if the assault which occasions the exercise of the right be of any of the descriptions hereinafter enumerated, namely.

First Such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that death will otherwise be the consequence of such assault.

Secondly. Such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that grievous hurt will otherwise be the consequence of such assault.

Thirdly. An assault with the intention of committing rape.

Fourthly. An assault with the intention of gratifying unnatural lust.

Fifthly. An assault with the intention of kidnapping.

Sixthly. An assault with the intention of wrongfully confining a person, under circumstances which may reasonably cause him to apprehend that he will be unable to have recourse to the public authorities for his release.

When such right extends to causing any harm other than death.

26. If the assault be not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding Clause, the right of private defence of the body does not extend to the voluntary causing of death to the assailant, but does extend, under the restrictions mentioned in Clause 24, to the voluntary causing to the assailant of any harm other than death.

Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of the body.

27. The right of private defence of the body commences as soon as a reasonable apprehension of danger to the body commences, though no assault may have been committed; and it continues as long as such apprehension of danger to the body continues.

When the right of private defence of property extends to causing death.

28. The right of private defence of property extends, under the restrictions mentioned in Clause 24, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the wrongdoer, if the offence, the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right, be an offence of any of the descriptions hereinafter enumerated, namely:

First. Robbery.

Secondly. House-breaking by night, or lurking house-trespass by night.

Thirdly. Mischief by fire committed on any building, tent, or vessel, which building, tent, or vessel is used as a human dwelling, or as a place for the custody of property.

Fourthly. Theft, mischief, or house trespass, under such circumstances as may reasonably cause apprehension that death or grievous hurt will be the consequence, if such right of private defence is not exercised.

When such right extends to causing any harm other than death.

29. If the offence, the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right of private defence, be theft, mischief, or criminal trespass, not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding Clause, that right does not extend to the voluntary causing of death, but does extend, subject to the restrictions mentioned in Clause 24, to the voluntary causing to the wrong-doer of any harm other than death.

Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of property.

30. The right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences.

The right of private defence of property against theft or robbery continues till either the assistance of the public authorities can be obtained, or the property has been recovered.

The right of private defence of property against criminal trespass or mischief continues as long as the offender continues in the commission of criminal trespass or mischief, or as long as a reasonable ground of apprehension of danger to the property continues.

The right of private defence of property against house-breaking by night, or lurking house-trespass by night, continues as long as the house-trespass, which has been begun by such house-breaking or lurking house-trespass, continues.

Right of private defence against a deadly assault when there is risk of harm to an innocent person.

31. If, in exercise of the right of private defence against an assault which reasonably causes the apprehension of death, the defender be so situated that he cannot effectually exercise that right without risk of harm to an innocent person, his right of private defence extends to the running of that risk.

Illustration.

A is attacked by a mob who attempt to murder him. He cannot effectually exercise his right of private defence without firing on the mob, and he cannot fire without risk of harming young children who are mingled with the mob. A commits no offence if by so firing he harms any of the children.

Chapter V.

OF PRINCIPALS AND ABETTORS.

Principal.

1. A person is a principal in an offence who, either singly or jointly with any other person, actually commits that offence, or who abets* the commission thereof, and is present when the act abetted is committed, and is capable of taking a part therein.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B waylay Z and murder him to death by beating him, each of them giving him several blows. A and B are principals in the murder, for they both join in actually committing it.

(b) A, being in the presence of B and Z, instigates B to murder Z. B, in consequence of such instigation, murders Z in A's presence. Here, as A is present when the murder is committed and abets by instigation that murder, A and B are principals in the murder.

(c) A and B conspire to murder Z. A, in pursuance of that conspiracy, stabs Z and thereby murders him in B's presence. Here, as B abets by conspiracy the murder committed in his presence, both B and A are principals.

(d) A and B agree to murder Z. A binds Z to a tree, and B then, in A's presence stabs him with a sword. Here A abets by aid the murder of Z, and as that murder is committed in his presence, both A and B are principals.

(e) A abets B to give false evidence in a Court of Justice. B, in consequence of A's instigation, gives false evidence. Here, notwithstanding A may be present in Court when the false evidence is given he is not a principal, but only an abettor, inasmuch as he was not capable of taking a part in B's act of giving evidence.

Explanation 1.—When the act is committed in consequence of the abetment, it is not necessary, in order to render the abettor liable, that the person committing the act should be capable by law of committing an offence, or that he should commit the act with the same guilty intention or knowledge as that of the abettor, or with any guilty knowledge or intention.

Illustrations.

(a) A, having such an intention as would render the killing of Z murder if A committed the act himself, instigates B, a madman, to commit that act. B, in consequence of such instigation, kills Z in A's presence. Here, A abets the offence of murder (see Clause 4); and as the act abetted was committed by B in his presence, A is a principal in the murder, though B was not guilty of any offence

(b) A, a prisoner confined in a cell in Jail, instigates B, a prisoner who is outside the cell, to murder Z, the Jailor. B commits the offence in consequence of the instigation. Here, if A was not capable of taking part in the act in consequence of his confinement, he is not a principal, but only an abettor.

Explanation 2.—Where there are several principals, in the commission of a criminal act, they may be guilty of different offences by means of that act.

Illustration.

A attacks Z under such circumstances of grave provocation that his killing of Z would be only culpable homicide. B, having ill-will towards Z, and not having been subject to the provocation, assists A in killing Z. Here, though A and B are both principals in causing Z's death, B is guilty of murder, and A is guilty only of culpable homicide.

Principal by doing one of several acts constituting an offence.

2. When an offence is committed by means of several acts, whoever voluntarily co-operates in the commission of that offence by actually doing any one of those acts either singly or jointly with any other person, or by abetting such act and being present when it is done, and capable of taking a part therein, is a principal in the offence.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B agree to murder Z by severally and at different times giving him small doses of poison. A and B administer the poison according to the agreement. Z dies from the effects of the several doses of poison so administered to him. Here A and B voluntarily co-operate in the commission of murder, and as each of them does an act by which the death is caused, they are both principals, though their acts are separate.

(b) A and B are joint Jailors, and as such, have the charge of Z, a prisoner, alternately for six hours at a time. A and B, intending to cause Z's death, knowingly co-operate in causing that effect by illegally omitting, each during the time of his attendance, to furnish Z with food. Z dies of hunger. Both A and B are principals in the murder of Z.

(c) A, a Jailor, has the charge of Z, a prisoner. A, intending to cause Z's death, illegally omits to supply Z with food; in consequence of which Z is much reduced in strength, but the starvation is not sufficient to cause his death. A is dismissed from his office, and B succeeds him. B, without collusion or co-operation with A, illegally omits to supply Z with food, knowing that he is likely thereby to cause Z's death. Z dies of hunger. B is guilty of murder; but as A did not co-operate with B, A is guilty only of an attempt to commit murder.

Explanation 1.—A person is said to be present within the meaning of the Clauses 1 and 2 of this Chapter who is near enough to render assistance to the person who does the act.

Explanation 2.—When the causing of a particular effect is necessary to constitute an offence, a person may be a principal in the commission of the offence, although not present when the effect is caused.

Illustrations.

(a) A lays poison for the purpose of poisoning Z. Z takes the poison and dies in consequence in the absence of A. A is a principal in the murder of Z, notwithstanding he was not present when the poison was taken, or the murder was consummated by Z's death.

* As to what amounts to abetment of an offence—See Clause 4 and Explanations.

(b) A instigates B to lay poison with the intention of poisoning Z, and is present when B lays it with that intent. Z, in the absence of A and B, takes the poison and dies in consequence. A and B are both principals in the murder of Z, though they were both absent when the effect was caused.

Abetment.

3. A person abets the doing of a thing, who,

First.—Instigates any person to do that thing, or

Secondly.—Engages in any conspiracy for the doing of that thing, if an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of that conspiracy, and in order to the doing of that thing, or

Thirdly.—Intentionally aids, by any act or illegal omission, the doing of that thing.

Explanation 1.—A person is said to instigate the doing of a thing who, by wilful misrepresentation or by wilful concealment of a material fact which he is bound to disclose, or otherwise, voluntarily causes or procures, or attempts to cause or procure, that thing to be done.

Illustration.

A, a public officer, is authorized by a warrant from a Court of Justice to apprehend Z. B, knowing that fact and also that C is not Z, wilfully represents to A that C is Z, and thereby intentionally causes A to apprehend C. Here B abets by instigation the apprehension of C.

Explanation 2.—Whoever, prior to or at the time of the commission of an act, does any thing in order to facilitate the commission of that act, and thereby facilitates the commission thereof, is said to aid the doing of that act.

Abettor.

4. A person is said to abet an offence who abets either the commission of an offence, or the commission of an act which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence with the intention or knowledge of the abettor.

Explanation 1.—A person may be guilty of abetting an offence by abetting the illegal omission of an act, by a person legally bound to do the act, although he may not himself be legally bound to do that act.

Illustration.

A instigates B to take a horse out of Z's possession, knowing that the horse belongs to Z and intending that B shall steal the horse. Here A abets the offence of theft, for he with the intention and knowledge which is necessary to constitute the taking a theft, abets that taking.

Explanation 2.—A person may be guilty of abetting an offence, although the act abetted be not committed; or the effect necessary to constitute the offence be not caused. In such case he will be punishable under Clauses 12 and 13 of this Chapter.

Explanation 3.—It is not necessary that the person abetted should be capable by law of committing an offence, or that he should have the same guilty intention or knowledge as that of the abettor, or any guilty intention or knowledge.

Illustration.

A, with a guilty intention, abets a child or a lunatic to commit an act which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence, and having the same intention as A. Here A, whether the act be committed or not, is guilty of abetting an offence. If the act be committed, he is punishable under Clause 5 of this Chapter; if the act be not committed, he is punishable under Clause 12 or 13 of this Chapter.

Punishment of abetment if the act abetted is committed in consequence, and where no express provision is made for its punishment.

5. Whoever abets any offence shall, if the act abetted is committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence, although he may not be a principal.

Illustrations.

(a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant. B accepts the bribe. A has abetted the offence defined under Clause 1 Chapter IX.

(b) A instigates B to give false evidence. B, in consequence of the instigation, commits that offence. A is guilty of abetting that offence, and is liable to the same punishment as B.

(c) A and B conspire to poison Z. A, in pursuance of the conspiracy, procures the poison and delivers it to B in order that he may administer it to Z. B, in pursuance of the conspiracy, administers the poison to Z in A's absence and thereby causes Z's death. Here B is guilty of murder. A is guilty of abetting that offence by conspiracy, and is liable to the punishment for murder.

Explanation 1.—It is not necessary that the person committing the act should be capable by law of committing an offence, or that he should commit the act with the same intention or knowledge as that of the abettor, or that by committing the act he should be guilty of any offence.

Illustrations.

(a) A, with the intention of murdering Z, instigates B, a child under seven years of age, to do an act which causes Z's death. B, in consequence of the abetment, does the act in the absence of A and thereby causes Z's death. Here, though B was not capable by law of committing an offence, A is liable to be punished in the same manner as if B had been capable by law of committing an offence, and had committed murder, and he is therefore subject to the punishment of death. If, in such a case, B does the act in the presence of A, A is a principal.

(b) A, with the intention of causing Z's property to be taken, fraudulently instigates B, a child under seven years of age, to take that property in a way which, in a grown-up person, would be the offence of theft. B takes the property in consequence. B has committed no offence, but A is liable to the same punishment as if B had committed theft.

(c) A instigates B to set fire to a dwelling house. B, in consequence of the unsoundness of his mind, being incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is wrong or contrary to law, sets fire to the house in consequence of A's instigation. B has committed no offence, but A is guilty of abetting the offence of setting fire to a dwelling house, and is liable to the punishment provided for that offence.

(d) A, intending to cause a theft to be committed, instigates B to take property belonging to Z out of Z's possession. A induces B to believe that the property belongs to A. B takes the property out of Z's possession, in good faith believing it to be A's property. B, acting under this misconception, does not take fraudulently, and therefore does not commit theft. But A is guilty of abetting theft, and is liable to the same punishment as if B had committed theft.

Explanation 2.—The abetment of an offence being an offence, the abetment of such an abetment is also an offence.

Illustration.

A instigates B to instigate C to murder Z. B accordingly instigates C to murder Z, and C commits that offence in consequence of B's instigation. B is liable to be punished for his offence with the punishment for murder, and as A instigated B to commit the offence, A is also liable to the same punishment.

Explanation 3.—An act or offence is said to be committed in consequence of abetment, when it is committed in consequence of the instigation, or in pursuance of the conspiracy, or with the aid which constitutes the abetment.

Explanation 4.—It is not necessary to the commission of the offence of abetment by conspiracy that the abettor should concert the offence with the person who commits it. It is sufficient if he engage in the conspiracy in pursuance of which the offence is committed.

Illustration.

A concerts with B a plan for poisoning Z. It is agreed that A shall administer the poison. B then explains the plan to C, mentioning that a third person is to administer the poison, but without mentioning A's name. C agrees to procure the poison and procures and delivers it to B for the purpose of its being used in the manner explained. A administers the poison; Z dies in consequence. Here, though A and C have not conspired together, yet C has been engaged in the conspiracy in pursuance of which Z has been murdered. C has therefore committed the offence defined in this Clause and is liable to the punishment for murder.

6. Whoever abets the commission of an offence shall, if the person abetted does the act with a different intention or knowledge from that of the abettor, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence which would have been committed if the act had been done with the intention or knowledge of the abettor and with no other.

Punishment of abetment if the person abetted does the act with a different intention from that of the abettor.

7. When an act is abetted and a different act is done, the abettor is liable for the act done, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had directly abetted it; provided the act done was a natural and probable consequence of the abetment, and was committed under the influence of the instigation, or with the aid or in pursuance of the conspiracy which constituted the abetment.

Liability of abettor when one act is abetted and a different act is done.

Proviso.

Illustrations.

(a) A instigates a child to put poison into the food of Z and gives him poison for that purpose. The child, in consequence of the instigation, by mistake puts the poison into the food of Y, which is by the side of that of Z. Here, if the child was acting under the influence of A's instigation and the act done was under the circumstances a probable consequence of the abetment, A is liable in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had instigated the child to put the poison into the food of Y.

(b) A instigates B to burn Z's house. B sets fire to the house and at the same time commits theft of property there. A, though guilty of abetting the burning of the house, is not guilty of abetting the theft; for the theft was a distinct act and not a probable consequence of the burning.

(c) A instigates B and C to break into an inhabited house at midnight for the purpose of robbery, and provides them with arms for that purpose. B and C break into the house, and being resisted by Z, one of the inmates, murder Z. Here, if that murder was the probable consequence of the abetment A is liable to the punishment provided for murder.

8. If the act for which the abettor is liable under the last preceding Clause is committed in addition to the act abetted and constitutes a distinct offence, the abettor is liable to cumulative punishment.

Abettor when liable to cumulative punishment for act abetted and for act done.

Illustration.

A instigates B to resist by force a distress made by a public servant. B, in consequence, resists that distress. In offering the resistance, B voluntarily causes grievous hurt to the officer executing the distress. As B has committed both the offence of resisting the distress and the offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt, B is liable to cumulative punishment for these offences; and if A knew that B was likely voluntarily to cause grievous hurt in resisting the distress, A will also be liable to cumulative punishment.

9. When an act is abetted with the intention on the part of the abettor of causing a particular effect, or with the knowledge that it is likely to cause that effect, and the act being done in consequence of the abetment, causes a different effect from that intended, or known by the abettor to be likely to be caused by the act abetted, the abettor is liable for the effect caused, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had abetted the act with the intention of causing that effect, or with the knowledge that it was likely to cause that effect, provided the effect caused was a natural and probable consequence of the act abetted.

Liability of abettor for an effect caused by the act abetted different from that intended by the abettor.

Illustration.

A instigates B to cause grievous hurt to Z. B, in consequence of the instigation, causes grievous hurt to Z. Z dies in consequence. Here, if death was the probable consequence of the grievous hurt abetted, A is liable to be punished with the punishment provided for murder.

10. If the effect for which the abettor is liable under the last preceding Clause is caused in addition to the effect which the abettor intended to cause, and the causing of such effects constitutes separate offences, the abettor is liable to cumulative punishment.

Abettor liable to cumulative punishment for the effect intended and for the effect caused if separate offences.

11. If any person in abetting an offence also commits an offence under any Clause contained in any other Chapter of this Code, the punishment shall be cumulative.

Cumulative punishment when a person, in abetting an offence, commits another offence.

Illustration.

A, by putting B in fear of death, instigates B to commit mischief. Here A is liable both to the punishment provided for abetting B to commit mischief and to the punishment for criminally putting B in fear of death.

12. Whoever abets the commission of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life, shall, if that offence be not committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine; and if any act be done in consequence of the abetment, which causes harm to any person, shall be liable to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Abetment of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life if the offence be not committed in consequence of the abetment.

If an act which causes harm be done in consequence of the abetment.

Illustration.

A instigates B to murder Z. The offence is not committed. If B had murdered Z he would have been subject to the punishment of death or transportation for life. Therefore A is liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years and also to a fine; and if any harm be done Z in consequence of the abetment, he will be liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and to fine.

13. Whoever abets an offence punishable with imprisonment shall, if that offence be not committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for that offence, for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term provided for that offence, or with such fine as is provided for that offence, or both; and if the abettor or the person abetted is a public servant, whose duty it is to prevent the commission of such offence, the abettor shall be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for that offence, for a term which may extend to one-half of the longest term provided for that offence, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or both.

Abetment of an offence punishable with imprisonment, if the offence be not committed in consequence of the abetment.

If the abettor or the person abetted, be a public servant whose duty it is to prevent the offence.

Illustrations.

(a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant. B refuses to accept the bribe. A is punishable under this Clause.

(b) A instigates B to give false evidence. Here, if B does not give false evidence, A has nevertheless committed the offence defined in this Clause, and is punishable accordingly.

(c) A, a Police officer, whose duty it is to prevent robbery, abets the commission of robbery. Here, though the robbery be not committed, A is liable to one-half of the longest term of imprisonment provided for that offence, and also to fine.

(d) B abets the commission of robbery by A, a Police officer, whose duty it is to prevent that offence. Here, though the robbery be not committed, B is liable to one-half of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence of robbery, and also to fine.

14. Whoever abets the commission of an offence, by the public generally, or by any number or class of persons exceeding ten, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Abetting the commission of an offence by the public or by more than 10 persons.

Illustration.

A affixes in a public place a placard, instigating a sect consisting of more than ten members to meet at a certain time and place, for the purpose of attacking the members of an adverse sect, while engaged in a procession. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

15. Whoever voluntarily conceals, by any act or illegal omission, the existence of a design to commit an offence punishable with death or transportation for life, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if that offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years; or, if the offence be not committed, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years: and in either case shall also be liable to fine.

A, knowing that dacoity is about to be committed at B, falsely informs the Magistrate that a dacoity is about to be committed at C, a place in an opposite direction, and thereby misleads the Magistrate. The dacoity is committed at B in pursuance of the design. A is punishable under this Clause.

16. Whoever, being a public servant, conceals, by any act or illegal omission, the existence of a design to commit any offence the commission of which it is his duty, as such public servant, to prevent, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if the offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-half of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for that offence, or with both; or, if the offence be punishable with death or transportation for life, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years; or, if the offence be not committed, shall be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

A, an officer of Police, being legally bound to give information of all designs to commit robbery which may come to his knowledge, and knowing that B designs to commit robbery, omits to give such information. Here A has by an illegal omission concealed the existence of B's design, and is liable to punishment according to the provision of this Clause.

17. Whoever conceals, by any act or illegal omission, the existence of a design to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if the offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth, and if the offence be not committed, to one-eighth of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

Chapter VI.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE.

1. Whoever, except as hereinafter excepted, wages war against the Queen or the Government of the East India Company, or attempts to wage such war, or abets the waging of such war, shall be punished with death, or transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding fourteen years, and shall forfeit all his property.

Waging or attempting to wage war, or abetting the waging of war against the Government.

Exception. A Prince or Subject of a Foreign State by which war is lawfully waged against the Queen or the East India Company, or a subject of a Foreign Prince or State who abets that Prince or State in waging such war, is not within the meaning of this Clause.

Illustrations.

(a) A joins an insurrection against the Government of the East India Company. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

(b) A in India abets an insurrection against the Queen's Government of Ceylon by sending arms to the insurgents. A is guilty of abetting a war against the Queen.

(c) A joins an army of a foreign State which has invaded the territories of the East India Company, and serves in that army, not being a subject of that State, or of any other State at war with the Queen or the East India Company. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

(d) A instigates a native power to make war on the Government of the East India Company, not being a subject of that power. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

2. But it does appear that A accepted the sum as a motive or a reward for generally shewing favor in the exercise of his official functions to that power. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

Chapter VII.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING THE HUMAN BODY.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING LIFE.

1. WHOEVER causes death by doing an act with the intention of causing death, or with the intention of causing such bodily injury as likely to cause death, or with the knowledge that he is likely by such act to cause death, commits the offence of culpable homicide.

Culpable homicide.

Illustrations.

(a) A lays sticks and turf over a pit, with the intention of thereby causing death or with the knowledge that death is likely to be thereby caused. Z, believing the ground to be firm, treads on it, falls in, and is killed. A has committed the offence of culpable homicide

(b) A, with the intention or knowledge aforesaid, relates agitating tidings to Z, who is in a critical stage of a dangerous illness. Z dies in consequence A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(c) A with the intention or knowledge aforesaid, threatens to cause the instant death of Z, unless Z jumps out of a window. Z jumps out of the window in consequence of the threat and thereby kills himself. A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(d) A is hired to guide Z through a jungle. In the midst of the jungle, A, no circumstance having occurred to release him from his legal obligation to guide Z through the jungle, leaves Z in the jungle with the knowledge that Z is likely to be lost in the jungle and starved to death in consequence Z is lost in the jungle and starved to death in consequence. A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(e) A knows Z to be behind a bush. B does not know it. A, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely to cause Z's death, induces B to fire at the bush. B fires and kills Z. Here B may be guilty of no offence; but A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

Explanation 1. A person who causes bodily injury to another who is labouring under a disorder, disease, or bodily infirmity, and thereby accelerates the death of that other, shall be deemed to have caused his death.

Explanation 2. Where death is caused by bodily injury, the person who causes such bodily injury shall be deemed to have caused the death, although by resorting to proper remedies and skilful treatment the death might have been prevented.

Explanation 3. The causing of the death of a child in the mother's womb is not homicide. But it may amount to culpable homicide to cause the death of a living child if any part of that child has been brought forth, though the child may not have breathed or been completely born.

2. Except in the cases hereinafter excepted, culpable homicide is murder if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death, or—

Murder.

2ndly. If it is done with the intention of causing such bodily injury as the offender knows to be likely to cause the death of the person to whom the harm is caused, or—

3rdly. If it is done with the intention of causing bodily injury to any person and the bodily harm intended to be inflicted is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, or—

4thly. If the person committing the act knows that it is so imminently dangerous that it must in all probability cause death or such bodily injury as is likely to cause death, and commits such act without any excuse for incurring the risk of causing death or such injury as aforesaid and under circumstances which indicate a depraved mind regardless of human life.

Illustrations.

(a) A shoots Z with the intention of killing him. Z dies in consequence. A commits murder

(b) A, knowing that Z is labouring under such a disease that a blow on a particular part of his body is likely to cause his death, strikes him on that particular part of his body with intention of causing bodily injury. Z dies in consequence of the blow. A is guilty of murder, although the blow might not have been sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause the death of a person in a sound state of health. But if A, not knowing that Z is labouring under any disease, gives him such a blow as would not in the ordinary course of nature kill a person in a sound state of health, here A, although he may intend to cause bodily injury, is not guilty of murder if he did not intend to cause death.

(c) A gives Z sword-cuts and club-wounds sufficient to cause the death of a man in the ordinary course of nature. Z dies in consequence. Here if A intended to cause that degree of bodily injury to Z which he inflicted, A is guilty of murder, although it may not be proved that A intended to cause Z's death.

(d) A without any excuse fires a loaded cannon into a crowd of persons and kills one of them, A is guilty of murder although he may not have had a premeditated design to kill any particular individual.

Exception 1. Culpable homicide is not murder if the offender, whilst deprived of the power of self-control by the excitement of fear or anger caused by grave and sudden provocation, causes the death of the person who gave the provocation, or causes the death of any other person by mistake or accident in doing an act caused by such fear or anger.

When culpable homicide is not murder.

The above exception is subject to the following provisoes.

First. That the provocation is not sought or voluntarily provoked by the offender as an excuse for killing or doing harm to any person.

Secondly. That the provocation is not given by any thing done in obedience to the law or by a public servant in the lawful exercise of the powers of such public servant.

Thirdly. That the provocation is not given by any thing done in the lawful exercise of the right of private defence.

Explanation. Whether the provocation was grave enough or the passion of fear or anger sudden enough to prevent the offence from amounting to murder is a question of fact.

Illustrations.

(a) A, under the influence of passion excited by a provocation given by Z, intentionally kills Y, Z's child. This is murder, inasmuch as the provocation was not given by the child and the death of the child was not caused by accident or misfortune in doing an act caused by the provocation.

(b) Y gives grave and sudden provocation to A. A, on this provocation, fires a pistol at Y, neither intending or knowing himself to be likely to kill Z, who is near him, but out of sight. A kills Z. Here A has not committed murder but merely culpable homicide.

(c) A is lawfully arrested by Z, a bailiff. A is excited to sudden and violent passion by the arrest, and voluntarily kills Z. This is murder, inasmuch as the provocation was given by a thing done by a public servant in obedience to the law.

(d) A appears as a witness before Z, a Magistrate. Z says that he does not believe a word of A's deposition and that A has perjured himself. A is moved to sudden passion by these words and kills Z. This is murder.

(e) A attempts to pull Z's nose. Z, in the exercise of the right of private defence, lays hold of A to prevent him from doing so. A is moved to sudden and violent passion in consequence, and kills Z. This is murder, inasmuch as the provocation was given by a thing done in the exercise of the right of private defence.

(f) Z strikes B. B is by this provocation excited to violent rage. A, a by-stander, intending to take advantage of B's rage, and to cause him to kill Z, puts a knife into B's hand for that purpose. B kills Z with the knife. Here B may have committed only culpable homicide, but A is guilty of murder.

Exception 2. Culpable homicide is not murder if the offender in the exercise of the right of private defence of person or property exceeds the power given to him by law and causes the death of the person against whom he is exercising such right of defence without premeditation, and without any intention of doing more harm than is necessary for the purpose of such defence.

Illustration

Z attempts to horsewhip A, not in such a manner as to cause grievous hurt to A. A draws out a pistol. Z persists in the assault. A believing in good faith that he can by no other means prevent himself from being horse-whipped, shoots Z dead. A has not committed murder, but only culpable homicide.

Exception 3. Culpable homicide is not murder if the offender, being a public servant, acting for the advancement of public justice, exceeds the powers given to him by law and causes death by doing an act which he in good faith believes to be necessary for the due discharge of his duty as such public servant and without ill-will towards the person whose death is caused.

Exception 4. Culpable homicide is not murder if it is committed without premeditation in a sudden fight in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel and without the offender's having taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner.

Explanation. It is immaterial in such cases which party offers the provocation or commits the first assault.

Exception 5. Culpable homicide is not murder when the person whose death is caused, being above the age of eighteen years, suffers death or takes the risk of death with his own consent.

Explanation 1. A consent is not within the meaning of this exception if it is given by a person under fear of injury, or under a misconception of fact, and if the offender knows or has reason to believe that the consent is given in consequence of such fear or misconception.

Explanation 2. Culpable homicide committed by a person who voluntarily puts himself to death is within this exception.

Illustrations.

(a) A, by instigation, voluntarily causes Z, a person under eighteen years of age, to commit suicide. Here, on account of Z's youth, he was incapable of giving consent to his own death; A has therefore abetted murder.

(b) A, by intentionally deceiving Z, who is laboring under a painful disease, and inducing him to believe that his disease is incurable, when A knows that it is not so, voluntarily causes Z to commit suicide. Here, on account of the deception practised by A, the offence cannot be culpable homicide by consent. A has therefore abetted murder.

(c) A by instigation voluntarily causes Z, a person above eighteen years of age, to put himself to death. A has abetted culpable homicide, but not murder.

Culpable homicide by causing the death of a person other than the person whose death was intended.

3. If a person, by doing any thing which he intends or knows to be likely to cause death, commits culpable homicide by causing the death of any person whose death he neither intends nor knows himself to be likely to cause, the culpable homicide committed by the offender is of the description of which it would have been if he had caused the death of the person whose death he intended or knew himself to be likely to cause.

Punishment for murder.

4. Whoever commits murder shall be punished with death, or transportation for life, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for murder by a life convict.

5. Whoever being under sentence of transportation for life is a principal in murder by actually committing that offence, shall be punished with death.

Punishment for culpable homicide not amounting to murder.

6. Whoever commits culpable homicide not amounting to murder, shall be punished with transportation for life or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years and shall also be liable to fine, if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death or of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death; or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, or with fine, or both, if the act is done with the knowledge that it is likely to cause death but without any intention to cause death or to cause such bodily injury as is likely to cause death.

Abetment of suicide of child or insane person.

7. If any person under eighteen years of age, any insane person, any delirious person, any idiot, or any person in a state of intoxication commits suicide, whoever abets the commission of such suicide shall be punished with death or transportation for life or imprisonment for a term not exceeding fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Illustrations.

(a) A shoots at Z with intention to kill him, under such circumstances that, if death ensued, A would be guilty of murder. A is liable to punishment under this Clause.

(b) A intending to murder Z by means of a spring gun, purchases such a gun; A has not yet committed the offence defined in this Clause. A sets the gun loaded in Z's path, and leaves it there. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

(c) A intending to murder Z by poison purchases poison and mixes the same with food which remains in A's keeping; A has not yet committed the offence in this Clause. A places the food on Z's table or delivers it to Z's servants to place it on Z's table. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

Attempt to commit culpable homicide.

10. Whoever attempts to commit culpable homicide and does any act with such intention or knowledge and under such circumstances that if he by that act or omission caused death, he would be guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or both; and if hurt is caused to any person by such act, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or both.

Illustrations.

(a) A, on grave and sudden provocation, fires a pistol at Z, under such circumstances that if he thereby caused death he would be guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

(b) A pursues a thief and fires at him under such circumstances that if he killed the thief he would commit culpable homicide in defence. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

Causing miscarriage.

14. Whoever voluntarily causes a woman with child to miscarry, shall, if such miscarriage be not caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the woman, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or both; and if the woman be quick with child, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation. A woman may be guilty of this offence by causing herself to miscarry.

15. Whoever commits the offence defined in the last preceding Clause without the consent of the woman, whether the woman is quick with child or not, shall be punished with transportation for life or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Consent given through fear of injury.

A consent is not within the meaning of this Clause if it is given by a person under fear of injury or under a misconception of fact, and if the person committing the offence knows or has reason to believe that the consent was given in consequence of such fear or misconception.

16. Whoever, with intent to cause the miscarriage of a woman with child, does any act which causes the death of such woman, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and if the act is done without the consent of the woman, shall be punished either with transportation for life or with the punishment above-mentioned.

Explanation. It is not essential to this offence that the offender should know that the act is likely to cause death.

Act done with intent to prevent a child being born alive or to cause it to die after birth.

17. Whoever before the birth of any child does any act with the intention of thereby preventing that child from being born alive or causing it to die after its birth, and does by such act prevent that child from being born alive or causes it to die after its birth, shall, if such act be not caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the mother, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, or with fine, or both.

Whoever does any act under such circumstances that if he thereby caused death he would be guilty of culpable homicide, and does by such act cause the death of a quick unborn child, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Illustration.

A, knowing that he is likely to cause the death of a pregnant woman, does an act which, if it caused the death of the woman, would amount to culpable homicide. The woman is injured but does not die; but the death of an unborn quick child with which she is pregnant is thereby caused. A is guilty of the offence defined in this Clause.

Exposure and abandonment of a child under 5 years by parent or person having care of it.

Wrongful confinement for ten or more days.

47. Whoever keeps any person in wrongful confinement, knowing that a writ for the liberation of that person has been duly issued, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years in addition to any term of imprisonment to which he may be liable under any other Clause of this Chapter.

Wrongful confinement for the purpose of extorting confession or of compelling restoration of property.

51. Whoever, while keeping any person in wrongful confinement, knowing a certain thing to be necessary to prevent the person confined from being in danger of death, or hurt, voluntarily omits to furnish that thing to the person confined, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or both.

Wrongful confinement and omission to furnish to person confined a certain thing necessary to prevent death or hurt.

Illustration.

Z's eyes are in such a state as to require constant medical care. A wrongfully confines Z, and knowing that without medical attendance Z is likely to lose his eye-sight, omits to procure such medical attendance. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause. It Z loses his eye-sight A has by an illegal omission voluntarily caused Z to lose his eye-sight, and has thus become liable to the punishment of having voluntarily caused grievous hurt to Z.

OF CRIMINAL FORCE AND ASSAULT

52. A person is said to use force to another if he causes motion, change of motion, or cessation of motion to that other, or if he causes to any substance such motion, or change of motion, or cessation of motion as brings that substance into contact with any part of that other's body, or with any thing which that other is wearing or carrying or with anything so situated that such contact affects that other's sense of feeling: provided that the person causing the motion, or change of motion, or cessation of motion, causes that motion, change of motion, or cessation of motion in one of the three ways hereinafter described.

Force.

First.—By his own bodily power.

Secondly.—By disposing any substance in such a manner that the motion or change or cessation of motion takes place without any further act on his part, or on the part of any other person.

Thirdly. By inducing any animal to move, to change its motion, or to cease to move.

53. Whoever intentionally uses force to any person, without that person's consent, in order to the committing of any offence, or intending by the use of such force to cause, or knowing it to be likely that by the use of such force he will cause injury, fear, or annoyance to the person to whom the force is used, is said to use criminal force to that other.

Criminal force

Illustrations.

(a) Z is sitting in a moored boat on a river A unfastens the moorings, and thus intentionally causes the boat to drift down the stream. Here A intentionally causes motion to Z, and he does this by disposing substances in such a manner that the motion is produced without any other act on any person's part A has therefore intentionally used force to Z; and if he has done so without Z's consent, in order to the committing of any offence, or intending or knowing it to be likely that this use of force may cause injury, fear, or annoyance to Z, A has used criminal force to Z.

(b) Z is riding in a chariot. A lashes Z's horses, and thereby causes them to quicken their pace. Here A has caused change of motion to Z by inducing animals to change their motion. A has therefore used force to Z, and if A has done this without Z's consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby injure, frighten, or annoy Z, A has committed criminal force to Z.

(c) Z is riding in a palanquin. A, intending to rob Z, seizes the pole, and stops the palanquin. Here A has caused cessation of motion to Z, and he has done this by his own bodily power. A has therefore used force to Z; and as A has acted thus intentionally, without Z's consent, in order to the commission of an offence, A has used criminal force to Z.

(d) A intentionally pushes against Z in the street. Here A has by his own bodily power moved his own person so as to bring it into contact with Z: he has therefore intentionally used force to Z; and if he has done so without Z's consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby injure, frighten, or annoy Z, he has used criminal force to Z.

(e) A throws a stone intending or knowing it to be likely that the stone will be thus brought into contact with Z, or with Z's clothes, or with something carried by Z, or that it will strike water, and dash up the water against Z's clothes, or something carried by Z. Here, if the throwing of the stone produce the effect of causing any substance to come into contact with Z or Z's clothes, A has used force to Z; and if he did so without Z's consent, intending thereby to injure, frighten, or annoy Z, he has used criminal force to Z.

(f) A intentionally pulls up a woman's veil. Here A intentionally uses force to her; and if he does so without her consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby injure, frighten, or annoy her, he has used criminal force to her.

(g) Z is bathing. A pours into the bath water which he knows to be boiling. Here A intentionally by his own bodily power causes such motion in the boiling water as brings that water into contact with Z, or with other water so situated his such contact must affect Z's sense of feeling: A has therefore intentionally used force to Z; and if he has done this without Z's consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause injury, fear, or annoyance to Z, A has used criminal force.

(b) A incites a dog to spring upon Z without Z's consent. Here, if A intends to cause injury, fear, or annoyance to Z, he uses criminal force to Z.

Assault.

54. Whoever makes any gesture, or any preparation, intending or knowing it to be likely that by such gesture or preparation he may cause any person present to apprehend that he who makes that gesture or preparation is about to use force to that other and thereby to affect that other's sense of feeling by bringing any substance into contact with any part of that other's body or any thing which that other is wearing, carrying, or using, is said to commit an assault.

Explanation. Mere words do not amount to an assault. But the words which a person uses may give to his gestures or preparations such a meaning as may make those gestures or preparations amount to an assault.

Illustrations.

(a) A shakes his fist at Z, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause Z to believe that A is about to strike Z. A has committed an assault.

(b) A begins to unloose the muzzle of a ferocious dog, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause Z to believe that he is about to cause the dog to attack Z. A has committed an assault upon Z.

(c) A takes up a stick, saying to Z, "I will give you a beating." Here, though the words used by A could in no case amount to an assault, and though the mere gesture unaccompanied by any other circumstances, might not amount to an assault, the gesture explained by the words may amount to an assault.

Punishment for using criminal force otherwise than on grave provocation.

55. Whoever uses criminal force to any person otherwise than on grave and sudden provocation given by that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred Rupees, or with both.

Illustrations.

(a) A kidnaps Z from British India, intending or knowing it to be likely that Z may be sacrificed to an Idol. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

Chapter XVII.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY.

OF THEFT.

1. Whoever, intending to take fraudulently any moveable property out of the possession of any person without that person's consent, moves that property in order to such taking, is said to commit theft.

Theft.

Explanation 1. A thing so long as it is attached to the earth, not being moveable property, is not the subject of theft; but it becomes capable of being the subject of theft as soon as it is severed from the earth.

Explanation 2. A thing, which is attached to the earth, becomes capable of being the subject of theft as soon as it is severed from the earth.

Explanation 3. A moving, effected by the same act which effects the severance, may be a theft.

Explanation 4. A person is said to cause a thing to move by removing an obstacle which prevented it from moving, or by separating it from any other thing, as well as by actually moving it.

Explanation 5. A person, who by any means causes an animal to move, is said to move that animal, and to move every thing which, in consequence of the motion so caused, is moved by that animal.

Explanation 6. The consent mentioned in the definition may be express, or implied, and may be given either by the person in possession, or by any person having for that purpose authority either express or implied.

Illustrations.

(a) A cuts down a tree on Z's ground, with the intention of fraudulently taking the tree out of Z's possession, without Z's consent. Here, as soon as A has severed the tree, in order to such taking, he has committed theft.

(b) A puts a bait for dogs in his pocket, and thus induces Z's dog to follow it. Here, if A's intention be fraudulently to take the dog out of Z's possession without Z's consent, A has committed theft as soon as Z's dog has begun to follow A.

(c) A drives Z's sheep before him, with the intention of fraudulently taking them out of Z's possession, without Z's consent. As soon as any sheep begins to move in the direction in which A intended that it should move, A has committed theft.

(d) A meets a bullock carrying a box of treasure. He drives the bullock in a certain direction, in order that he may fraudulently take the treasure. As soon as the bullock begins to move, A has committed theft on the treasure.

(e) A being Z's servant and intrusted by Z with the care of Z's plate, fraudulently runs away with the plate, without Z's consent. Here, the plate, till carried off by A, was still in Z's possession, though it was also in A's possession. A has therefore committed theft.

(f) Z, going on a journey, entrusts his plate to A, the keeper of a warehouse, till Z shall return. A carries the plate to a gold smith and sells it. Here, the plate was not in Z's possession. It could not therefore be taken out of Z's possession, and A has not committed theft, though he may have committed criminal breach of trust.

(g) A finds a ring belonging to Z on a table in the house which Z occupies. Here, the ring is in Z's possession, and if A fraudulently removes it, A commits theft.

(h) A finds a ring lying on the high-road, not in the possession of any person. A by taking it commits no theft, though he may commit criminal misappropriation of property.

(i) A sees a ring belonging to Z lying on a table in Z's house. Not venturing to misappropriate the ring immediately for fear of search and detection, A hides the ring in a place where it is highly improbable that it will ever be found by Z, with the intention of taking the ring from the hiding place, and selling it when the loss is forgotten. Here A, at the time of first moving the ring, commits theft.

(j) A delivers his watch to Z, a jeweller, to be regulated. Z carries it to his shop. A, not owing to the jeweller any debt for which the jeweller might lawfully detain the watch as a security, enters the shop openly, takes his watch by force out of Z's hand, and carries it away. Here A, though he may have committed criminal trespass, and assault, has not committed theft, inasmuch as what he did was not done fraudulently.

(k) If A owes money to Z for repairing the watch, and if Z retains the watch lawfully as a security for the debt, and A takes the watch out of Z's possession, with the intention of keeping Z out of the money due to him, he commits theft, inasmuch as he takes it fraudulently.

(l) Again if A, having pawned his watch to Z, takes it out of Z's possession without Z's consent, not having paid what he had borrowed on the watch he commits theft though the watch is his own property, inasmuch as he takes it fraudulently.

(m) A takes an article belonging to Z out of Z's possession, without Z's consent, with the intention of keeping it until he obtains money from Z as a reward for its restoration. Here, A takes fraudulently; A has therefore committed theft.

(n) A, being exasperated at a passage in a book which is lying on the counter of Z, a bookseller, snatches it up, and tears it to pieces. A has not committed theft, as he has not acted fraudulently, though he may have committed criminal trespass and mischief.

(o) A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent for the purpose merely of reading it, and with the intention of returning it. Here, it is probable that A may have conceived that he had Z's implied consent to use Z's book. If this was A's impression, A has not committed theft.

(p) A asks charity from Z's wife. She gives A money, food, and clothes which A knows to belong to Z her husband. Here, it is probable that A may conceive that Z's wife is authorized to give away alms. If this was A's impression, A has not committed theft.

(q) A is the paramour of Z's wife. She gives A valuable property which A knows to belong to her husband Z, and to be such property as she has not authority from Z to give. If A takes the property, he commits theft.

(r) A in good faith believing property belonging to Z to be A's own property, takes that property out of B's possession. Here, as A does not take fraudulently, he does not commit theft.

2. Whoever commits theft shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or both.

Punishment for theft.

3. Whoever being a clerk or servant, or being employed in the capacity of a clerk or servant, commits theft in respect of any property in the possession of his master or employer, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or both.

Theft by clerk or servant of property in possession of master.

4. Whoever commits theft, having made preparation for causing death, or hurt, or restraint, or fear of death, or of hurt, or of restraint to any person, in order to the committing of such theft or in order to the effecting of his escape after the committing of such theft, or in order to the retaining of property taken by such theft, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Theft after preparation made for causing death or hurt in order to the committing of the theft.

Illustrations.

(a) A commits theft on property in Z's possession; and, while committing this theft, he has a loaded pistol under his garment, having provided this pistol for the purpose of hurting or terrifying Z in case Z should resist. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

(b) A picks Z's pocket, having posted several of his companions near him, in order that they may restrain Z, if Z should perceive what is passing and should resist, or should attempt to apprehend A. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

OF EXTORTION.

5. Whoever intentionally puts any person in fear of any injury to that person, or to any other, and thereby fraudulently induces the person so put in fear to deliver to any person any property or valuable security or any thing signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security, commits "extortion."

Extortion.

Illustrations.

(a) A threatens to publish a defamatory libel concerning Z, unless Z gives him money. He thus induces Z to give him money. A has committed extortion.

(b) A threatens Z that he will keep Z's child in wrongful confinement, unless Z will sign and deliver to A a promissory note binding Z to pay certain monies to A. Z signs and delivers the note. A has committed extortion.

(c) A threatens to send cattle-mischief to plough up Z's field, unless Z will sign and deliver to B a bond binding Z under a penalty to deliver certain produce to B. Z signs and delivers the bond. A has committed extortion.

(d) A by putting Z in fear of grievous hurt fraudulently induces Z to sign or affix his seal to a blank paper and deliver it to A. Z signs and delivers the paper to A. Here, as the paper so signed may be converted into a valuable security, A has committed extortion.

6. Whoever commits extortion, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or both.

Punishment for extortion.

7. Whoever, in order to the committing of extortion, puts any person in fear, or attempts to put any person in fear of any injury, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or both.

Putting person in fear of injury in order to commit extortion.

8. Whoever commits extortion by putting any person in fear of death or of grievous hurt to that person or to any other, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years and shall not be less than five, and shall also be liable to fine

Putting person in fear of death or of grievous hurt in order to commit extortion.

9. Whoever, in order to the committing of extortion, puts or attempts to put any person in fear of death or of grievous hurt to that person or to any other, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years and shall not be less than three, and shall also be liable to fine.

Extortion by threat of accusation of an offence punishable with death or transportation, &c.

10. Whoever commits extortion by putting any person in fear of an accusation, against that person or any other, of having committed or attempted to commit any offence punishable with death or transportation for life, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to fourteen years and shall not be less than five, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Putting person in fear of accusation of offence in order to commit extortion.

11. Whoever, in order to the committing of extortion, puts or attempts to put any person in fear of an accusation, against that person or any other, of having committed or attempted to commit an offence punishable with death or transportation for life, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to fourteen years and shall not be less than three, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine.

OF ROBBERY AND DACOITY.

Robbery.

12. In all robbery there is either theft or extortion.

When theft is robbery.

Theft is "robbery", if, in order to the committing of the theft, or in committing the theft, or in carrying away or attempting to carry away property obtained by theft, the offender, for that end, voluntarily causes or attempts to cause to any person death or hurt or wrongful restraint or fear of instant death or of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint.

When extortion is robbery.

Extortion is "robbery", if the offender, at the time of committing the extortion, is in the presence of the person put in fear, and commits the extortion by putting that person in fear of instant death, of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint to that person, or to some other person present at the time of committing the extortion, and, by so putting in fear, induces the person so put in fear then and there to deliver up any property.

Illustrations.

(a) A holds Z down, and fraudulently takes Z's money and jewels from Z's clothes, without Z's consent. Here, A has committed theft, and, in order to the committing of that theft, has voluntarily caused wrongful restraint to Z. A has therefore committed robbery.

(b) A meets Z on the high road, shows a pistol, and demands Z's purse. Z surrenders his purse. Here, A has extorted the purse from Z by putting him in fear of instant hurt, and being at the time of committing the extortion in his presence. A has therefore committed robbery.

(c) A meets Z, and Z's child, on the high road. A takes the child, and threatens to fling it down a precipice, unless Z delivers his purse. Z delivers his purse. Here A has extorted the purse from Z, by causing Z to be in fear of instant hurt to the child who is there present. A has therefore committed robbery on Z.

(d) A obtains property from Z by saying—"your child is in the hands of my gang, and will be put to death unless you send us ten thousand Rupees." This is extortion, and punishable as such; but it is not robbery.

Dacoity.

13. When five or more persons, conjointly, commit or attempt to commit a robbery, or where the whole number of persons conjointly committing or attempting to commit a robbery, and persons present and aiding such commission or attempt, amount to five or more, every person so committing, attempting, or aiding, is said to commit "Dacoity."

20. If, at the time of attempting to commit robbery or dacoity, the offender is armed with any deadly weapon, the imprisonment with which such offender shall be punished shall not be less than five years.

Fraudulent misappropriation of property.

Illustrations.

(a) A takes property belonging to Z out of Z's possession, in good faith believing, at the time when he takes it, that the property belongs to himself. A is not guilty of theft; but if A, after discovering his mistake, fraudulently appropriates the property to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

(b) A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent. Here, if A was under the impression that he had Z's implied consent to take the book for the purpose of reading it, A has not committed theft. But if A afterwards sells the book for his own benefit, he is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

(c) A and B being joint owners of a horse, A takes the horse out of B's possession, intending to use it. Here, as A has a right to use the horse, he does not fraudulently misappropriate it. But if A sells the horse and appropriates the whole proceeds to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

Explanation 1. A fraudulent misappropriation for a time only is a misappropriation within the meaning of this Clause.

Illustration.

A finds a Government paper belonging to Z, bearing a blank endorsement. A, knowing that the paper belongs to Z, pledges it with a banker as a security for a loan, intending at a future time to restore it to Z. A has committed an offence under this Clause.

Explanation 2. A person who finds property not in the possession of any other person and takes such property for the purpose of protecting it for, or of restoring it to, the owner, does not take or misappropriate it fraudulently, and is not guilty of an offence; but he is guilty of the offence above defined, if he appropriates it to his own use, when he knows or has the means of discovering the owner, or before he has used reasonable means to discover and give notice to the owner, and has kept the property a reasonable time to enable the owner to claim it.

What are reasonable means or what is a reasonable time in such a case is a question of fact.

It is not necessary that the finder should know who is the owner of the property, or that any particular person is the owner of it: it is sufficient if, at the time of appropriating it, he does not believe it to be his own property, or in good faith believes that the real owner cannot be found.

Illustrations.

(a) A finds a Rupee on the high road, not knowing to whom the Rupee belongs. A picks up the Rupee. Here A has not committed the offence defined in this Clause.

(b) A finds a letter on the road, containing a bank note. From the direction and contents of the letter he learns to whom the note belongs. He appropriates the note. He is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

(c) A finds a cheque payable to bearer. He can form no conjecture as to the person who has lost the cheque. But the name of the person, who has drawn the cheque, appears. A knows that this person can direct him to the person in whose favor the cheque was drawn. A appropriates the cheque without attempting to discover the owner. He is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

(d) A sees Z drop his purse with money in it. A picks up the purse with the intention of restoring it to Z, but afterwards appropriates it to his own use. A has committed an offence under this Clause.

(e) A finds a purse with money, not knowing to whom it belongs; he afterwards discovers that it belongs to Z, and appropriates it to his own use. A is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

There is an express or implied contract between A and Z that all sums remitted by Z to A shall be invested by A according to Z's direction. Z remits a lac of Rupees to A, with directions to A to invest the same in Company's paper. A fraudulently disobeys the directions, and employs the money in his own business. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(d) But if A, in the last illustration, not fraudulently, but in good faith, believing that it will be more for Z's advantage to hold shares in the Bank of Bengal, disobeys Z's directions, and buys shares in the Bank of Bengal for Z, instead of buying Company's paper, here, though Z should suffer loss, and should be entitled to bring a Civil action against A on account of that loss, yet A, not having acted fraudulently, has not committed criminal breach of trust.

(e) A, a revenue officer, is entrusted with public money, and is either directed by law, or bound by a contract, express or implied, with the Government, to pay into a certain treasury all the public money which he holds. A has committed forgery.

(i) Z dictates his will to A. A intentionally writes down a different legatee from the legatee named by Z, and by representing to Z that he has prepared the will according to his instructions, induces Z to sign the will. A has committed forgery.

B after the seizure of the estate, in collusion with Z executes a lease of the estate to Z at a nominal rent and for a long period and dates the lease six months prior to the seizure with intent to defraud A and to cause it to be believed that the lease was granted before the seizure. (a) A says—"I think Z's evidence on that trial is so contradictory that he must be stupid or dishonest." A is within this exception if he says this in good faith; inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses respects Z's character as it appears in Z's conduct as a witness, and no further.

(b) But if A says—"I do not believe what Z asserted at that trial, because I know him to be a man without veracity;"—A is not within this exception, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z's character is an opinion not founded on Z's conduct as a witness.

Censure passed in good faith by a person having lawful authority over another.

8. Seventh Exception. It is not defamation in a person having over another any authority, either conferred by law, or arising out of a lawful contract made with that other, to pass in good faith any censure on the conduct of that other in matters to which such lawful authority relates.

Caution intended for the good of the person to whom it is conveyed.

11. Tenth Exception.—It is not defamation to convey a caution, in good faith, to one person against another, provided that such caution be intended for the good of the person to whom it is conveyed or of some person in whom that person is interested.

Illustrations.

(a) The Clauses in this Code, which contain definitions of offences, do not express that a child under seven years of age cannot commit such offences; but the definitions are to be understood subject to the general exception which provides that nothing shall be an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

(b) A, a Police Officer, without warrant, apprehends Z, who has committed murder. Here A is not guilty of the offence of wrongful confinement; for he was bound by law to apprehend Z: and therefore the case falls within Clause 1 of Chapter IV, which provides that "nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is bound by law to do it."

Illustration.

A Municipal Commissioner is a public servant.

Explanation 1. Persons falling under any of the above descriptions are public servants, whether appointed by the Government or not.

Explanation 2. Wherever the words "public servant" occur, they shall be understood of every person who is in actual possession of the situation of a public servant, whatever legal defect there may be in his right to hold that situation.

"Moveable property."

18. The words "moveable property" are intended to include corporeal property of every description, except land and things attached to the earth or permanently fastened to any thing which is attached to the earth.

"Wrongful gain."

19. "Wrongful gain" is gain, by unlawful means, of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled.

"Wrongful loss."

"Wrongful loss" is the loss, by unlawful means, of property to which the person losing it is legally entitled.

Wrongful retention.

A person is said to gain wrongfully when such person retains wrongfully, as well as when such person acquires wrongfully. A person is said to lose wrongfully when such person is wrongfully kept out of any property, as well as when such person is wrongfully deprived of property.

Wrongful detention.

"Fraudulently."

20. Whoever does any thing with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss or risk of wrongful loss to another person, is said to do that thing "fraudulently."

Property in possession of wife, clerk, or servant.

21. When property is in the possession of a person's wife, clerk, or servant, in trust for that person, it is in that person's possession; and not in the possession of his wife, clerk, or servant within the meaning of this Code.

Explanation. A person employed temporarily or on a particular occasion in the capacity of a clerk or servant, is a clerk or servant within the meaning of this Clause.

"Counterfeit."

22. A person is said to "counterfeit," who causes one thing to resemble another thing, intending by means of that resemblance to practise deception, or knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practised.

Explanation. It is not essential to counterfeiting that the imitation should be exact.

"Document."

23. The word "document" denotes any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures, or marks, or by one or more of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, as evidence of that matter.

Explanations 1. It is immaterial by what means or upon what substance the letters, figures, or marks are formed, or whether the evidence is intended for, or may be used in, a Court of Justice, or not.

Illustrations.

A writing expressing the terms of a contract may be used as evidence of the contract. It is therefore a document.

A Cheque upon a Banker is a document.

A Power of Attorney is a document.

A Map or Plan is a document.

A writing containing directions or instructions is a document.

Explanation 2. Whatever is expressed by means of letters, figures, or marks as explained by Mercantile or other usage, shall be deemed to be expressed by such letters, figures, or marks within the meaning of this Clause, although the same may not be actually expressed.

Illustration.

A writes his name on the back of a Bill of Exchange payable to his order. The meaning of the endorsement, as explained by Mercantile usage, is that the Bill is to be paid to the holder. The endorsement is a document, and must be construed in the same manner as if the words "pay to the holder" or words to that effect had been written over the signature.

"Valuable security."

24. The words "valuable security" denote a document which is, or purports to be, a document whereby any legal right is created, extended, transferred, restricted, extinguished, or released, or whereby any person acknowledges that he lies under legal liability, or has not a certain legal right.

Illustration.

A writes his name on the back of a Bill of Exchange. As the effect of this endorsement is to transfer the right to the Bill to any person who may become the lawful holder of it, the endorsement is a "valuable security."

"A Will."

25. The words "a will" denote any testamentary document.

Words referring to acts to include illegal omissions.

26. In every part of this Code except where a contrary intention appears from the context, words which refer to acts done extend also to illegal omissions.

Act, whether done directly or indirectly, is equally an offence.

27. Whenever the doing of any particular thing is an offence, it is an offence to do that thing either directly or indirectly.

"Act."
"Omission."

28. The word "act" denotes as well a series of acts as a single act: the word "omission" denotes as well a series of omissions as a single omission.

Effect caused partly by act, and partly by omission.

29. Wherever the causing of a certain effect, or an attempt to cause that effect, by an act or by an omission, is an offence, it is to be understood that the causing of that effect partly by an act and partly by an omission is the same offence.

Illustration.

A intentionally causes Z's death, partly by illegally omitting to give Z food, and partly by beating Z. A has committed murder.

"Voluntarily."

30. A person is said to cause an effect "voluntarily," when he causes it by means whereby he intended to cause it, or by means which, at the time of employing those means, he knew or had reason to believe to be likely to cause it.

Illustration.

A sets fire, by night, to an inhabited house in a large town, for the purpose of facilitating a robbery, and thus causes the death of a person. Here, A may not have intended to cause death, and may even be sorry that death has been caused by his act: yet, if he knew that he was likely to cause death, he has caused death voluntarily.

"Offence." 31. The word "offence" denotes a thing made punishable by this Code.

"Special law." 32. A "special law" is a law applicable to a particular subject.

"Local law." 33. A "local law" is a law applicable only to a particular part of British India.

"Illegal." 34. The word "illegal" is applicable to every thing which is an offence, or which is contrary to any direction of the law, or which furnishes ground for a civil action: and a person is said to be "legally bound to do" whatever it is illegal in him to omit.

"Injury." 35. The word "injury" denotes any harm whatever illegally caused to any person in body, mind, reputation, or property.

"Life." 36. The word "life" denotes the life of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

"Death." 37. The word "death" denotes the death of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

"Animal." 38. The word "animal" denotes any living creature, other than a human being.

"Vessel." 39. The word "vessel" denotes any thing made for the conveyance by water of human beings, or of property.

"Year." 40. Wherever the word "year" or the word "month" is used, it is to be understood that the year or the month is to be reckoned according to the British Calendar.

"Clause." 41. The word "Clause" denotes one of those portions of a Chapter of this Code which are distinguished by prefixed numeral figures.

"Herein-before." "Herein-after." 42. The word "herein-before" and the word "herein-after" relate to matter contained within the same Clause in which these words occur.

"Oath." 43. The word "oath" includes a solemn affirmation substituted by law for an oath, and any declaration required or authorized by law to be made before a public servant or to be used for the purpose of proof, whether in a Court of Justice or not.

Definition not to be limited by the title of the Chapter containing it. 44. Nothing which falls within any definition of an offence shall be construed as not being an offence, because it does not fall within the title of the Chapter containing that definition.

"Good faith." 45. Nothing is said to be done or believed in good faith, which is done or believed without due care and attention.

Chapter III.

OF PUNISHMENTS.

Punishments. 1. The punishments to which offenders are liable under the provisions of this Code are,

First,—Death;

Secondly,—Transportation;*

Thirdly,—Imprisonment, which is of two descriptions, namely:

(1.) Rigorous, that is, with hard labor;

(2.) Simple.

Fourthly.—Banishment from the territories in the possession and under the Government of the East India Company;

Fifthly,—Forfeiture of property;

Sixthly,—Fine.

Commutation of sentence of death. 2. In every case in which sentence of death shall have been passed, the Government of India or the local Government of the place within which the offender shall have been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for any other punishment provided by this Code.

Commutation of sentence of transportation for life. 3. In every case in which sentence of transportation for life has been passed, the Government of India or the local Government of the place within which the offender has been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for imprisonment of either description which may extend to fourteen years, or for banishment from the territories in the possession and under the Government of the East India Company, which may be for life, or for any term.

Remission of punishment. 4. In every case the Government of India or the local Government of the place within which an offender has been sentenced may, at any time, remit the whole or any part of the punishment, without conditions, or upon any conditions to which the offender has agreed.

Sentence of imprisonment, rigorous or simple. 5. In every case in which it is provided that an offender shall be punished with imprisonment of either description, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct in the sentence that such imprisonment shall be wholly rigorous, or that such imprisonment shall be wholly simple, or that any part of such imprisonment shall be rigorous and the rest simple.

Sentence of forfeiture of property. 6. In every case in which an offender is sentenced to forfeiture of all property, the sentence renders that offender incapable of acquiring any property except for the benefit of the Government.

Illustration.

A, for waging war against the Government of India, is sentenced to forfeiture of all his property. After the sentence A's father dies, leaving an estate which, but for the sentence of forfeiture, would become the property of A. The estate becomes the property of Government.

Amount of fine. 7. Where no sum is expressed to which a fine may extend, the amount of fine to which the offender is liable is unlimited.

Sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine. 8. In every case in which an offender is sentenced to a fine, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct by the sentence that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall suffer imprisonment for a certain term, which imprisonment shall be in excess of any other imprisonment to which he may have been sentenced, or to which he may be liable under a commutation of a sentence.

* As to cases in which penal servitude must be substituted for transportation, see Act XXIV of 1856.

9. The term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned, in default of payment of a fine, shall not exceed one-fourth of the term of imprisonment which is the maximum fixed for the offence, if the offence be punishable with imprisonment as well as fine.

Limit of term of imprisonment for default in payment of fine, when the offence is punishable with imprisonment, as well as fine.

10. The imprisonment which the Court imposes in default of payment of a fine may be of any description to which the offender might have been sentenced for the offence.

Description of imprisonment for such default.

11. If the offence be punishable with fine only, the term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned, in default of payment of fine, shall not exceed the following scale, that is to say, for any term not exceeding two months when the amount of the fine shall not exceed fifty Rupees, and for any term not exceeding four months when the amount shall not exceed one hundred Rupees, and for any term not exceeding six months in any other case.

Term of imprisonment for default in payment of fine, when the offence is punishable with fine only.

12. The imprisonment which is imposed in default of payment of a fine shall terminate whenever that fine is either paid or levied by process of law.

Such imprisonment to terminate upon payment of the fine.

13. If, before the expiration of the term of imprisonment fixed in default of payment, such a proportion of the fine be paid or levied that the term of imprisonment suffered in default of payment is not less than proportional to the part of the fine still unpaid, the imprisonment shall terminate.

Termination of such imprisonment upon payment of proportional part of fine.

Illustration.

A is sentenced to a fine of one hundred Rupees, and to four months' imprisonment in default of payment. Here, if seventy-five Rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of one month of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the first month has expired. If seventy-five Rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of the first month, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged. If fifty Rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of two months of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the two months are completed. If fifty Rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of those two months, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged.

14. The fine, or any part thereof which remains unpaid, may be levied at any time within six years after the passing of the sentence, and if, under the sentence, the offender be liable to imprisonment for a longer period than six years, then at any time previous to the expiration of that period; and the death of the offender does not discharge from the liability any property which would, after his death, be legally liable for his debts.

Fine may be levied within 6 years or at any time during the term of imprisonment.

Death of offender not to discharge his property from liability.

15. Whenever any person, by doing any thing whereby he commits an offence falling under one penal provision of this Code, also commits an offence under another penal provision of this Code, the punishment shall not be cumulative, unless it be so expressly provided.

Punishment of offence falling under more than one penal provision of Code not to be cumulative unless expressly so provided.

Illustration.

A strikes Z with violence knowing it to be likely that he may thereby break Z's arm, and does break Z's arm. Here A commits an assault. He also by the same act commits the offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt. But A is not liable to punishment both for assault, and for voluntarily causing grievous hurt.

16. Where it is provided that punishment shall be cumulative, that provision does not authorize the combining, in any case, of the punishments provided by more than two penal provisions of this Code.

Provision for cumulative punishment does not authorize a combination of punishments.

17. Where anything which is an offence is made up of parts, any of which parts is itself an offence, the offender shall not be punished with the imprisonment for more than one of such his offences, unless it be so expressly provided.

Limit of punishment of offence which is made up of several offences.

Illustrations.

(a) A gives Z fifty strokes with a stick. Here A may have committed the offence of voluntarily causing hurt to Z by the whole beating, and also by each of the blows which make up the whole beating. If A were liable to punishment for every blow, he might be imprisoned for fifty years, one for each blow. But he is liable only to one punishment for the whole beating, that is to say, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, if the hurt which he has voluntarily caused is not grievous; and for a term not exceeding ten years, if the hurt which he has voluntarily caused is grievous.

(b) But if, while A is beating Z, Y interferes, and A strikes Y. here, as the blow given to Y is no part of the act whereby A voluntarily causes hurt to Z, A is liable to one punishment for voluntarily causing hurt to Z, and to another for the blow given to Y.

18. In all cases in which judgment is given that a person is guilty of one of several offences specified in the judgment, but that it is doubtful of which of these offences he is guilty, the offender shall be punished for the offence for which the lowest punishment is provided if the same punishment is not provided for all.

Punishment of a person found guilty of one of several offences, (the judgment stating that it is doubtful of which.)

19. Whenever any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Code with imprisonment of either description, the Court may, by its sentence, order that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of the imprisonment to which he is sentenced, not exceeding six months in the whole or one month at a time, or three months in any one year.

Solitary confinement.

20. Whenever any person, convicted of any offence punishable under this Code with imprisonment of either description for a term of five years or upwards, shall have been previously convicted, whether before or after the passing of this Code, of any offence for which by the law then in force he was liable to imprisonment for a term of five years or upwards, he shall be subject to transportation for life or to double the amount of punishment to which he would otherwise have been liable; provided that he shall not in any case be liable to imprisonment for a term exceeding fourteen years.

Punishment of person convicted, after a previous conviction, of an offence punishable with five years' imprisonment.

Chapter IV.

GENERAL EXCEPTIONS.

1. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is or who by reason of a mistake of fact and not by reason of a mistake of law in good faith believes himself to be bound by law to do it.

Act done by a person bound, or by mistake of fact believing himself bound by law.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a soldier, fires on a mob by the order of his superior officer, in conformity with the commands of the law. A has committed no offence.

(b) A, an officer of a Court of Justice, being ordered by that Court to arrest Y, and, after due inquiry, believing Z to be Y, arrests Z. A has committed no offence.

Act of Judge when acting judicially.

2. Nothing is an offence which is done by a Judge when acting judicially in the exercise of any power which is, or which in good faith he believes to be given to him by law.

Act done by a person justified, or by mistake of fact believing himself justified by law.

3. Nothing is an offence which is done by any person who is justified by law, or who by reason of a mistake of fact and not by reason of a mistake of law, in good faith, believes himself to be justified by law in doing it.

Illustration.

A sees Z commit what appears to A to be a murder A, in the exercise, to the best of his judgment, exerted in good faith, of the power which the law gives to all persons of apprehending murderers in the fact, seizes Z, in order to bring Z before the proper authorities. A has committed no offence, though it may turn out that Z was acting in self defence.

Accident in the doing of a lawful act.

4. Nothing is an offence which is done by accident or misfortune and without any criminal intention or knowledge in the doing of a lawful act in a lawful manner by lawful means and with proper care and caution.

Illustration.

A is at a work with a hatchet; the head flies off and kills a man who is standing by. Here, if there was no want of proper caution on the part of A, his act is excusable and not an offence.

Act likely to cause harm but done without a criminal intent and to prevent other harm.

5. Nothing is an offence merely by reason of its being done with the knowledge that it is likely to cause harm, if it be done without any criminal intention to cause harm, and in good faith for the purpose of preventing or avoiding other harm to person or property.

Explanation.—It is a question of fact in such a case whether the harm to be prevented or avoided was of such a nature and so imminent as to justify or excuse the risk of doing the act with the knowledge that it was likely to cause harm.

Illustrations

(a) A, the Captain of a Steam Vessel, suddenly and without any fault or negligence on his part, finds himself in such a position that, before he can stop his vessel, he must inevitably run down a boat B with 20 or 30 passengers on board, unless he changes the course of his vessel, and that, by changing his course, he must incur risk of running down a boat C with only 2 passengers on board, which he may possibly clear. Here, if A alters his course without any intention to run down the boat C and in good faith for the purpose of avoiding the danger to the passengers in the boat B, he is not guilty of an offence, though he may run down the boat C by doing an act which he knew was likely to cause that effect, if it be found as a matter of fact that the danger which he intended to avoid was such as to excuse him in running the risk of running down C.

(b) A in a great fire pulls down houses in order to prevent the conflagration from spreading. He does this with the intention and good faith of saving human life or property. Here, if it be found that the harm to be prevented was of such a nature and so imminent as to excuse A's act, A is not guilty of the offence.

Act done pursuant to the judgment or order of a Court of Justice.

6. Nothing which is done in pursuance of, or which is warranted by the judgment or order of a Court of Justice, if done whilst such judgment or order remains in force, is an offence, notwithstanding the Court may have had no jurisdiction to pass such judgment or order, provided the person doing the act, in good faith, believes that the Court had such jurisdiction.

Act of a child under 7 years of age.

7. Nothing is an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

Act of a child above 7 and under 12 years of age who has not sufficient maturity of understanding.

8. Nothing is an offence which is done by child above seven years of age and under twelve, who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct on that occasion.

Act of a person of unsound mind.

9. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, by reason of unsoundness of mind, is incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong, or contrary to law.

Act of a person incapable of judgment by reason of intoxication caused against his will.

10. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, is, by reason of intoxication, incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong, or contrary to law; provided that the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

A particular intent when part of an offence, may be presumed when the offender is intoxicated, unless he has been made so against his will.

11. In cases where an act done is not an offence unless done with a particular knowledge or intent, the same presumption of knowledge or intent shall be made against a person doing the act in a state of intoxication, as would have been made if he had not been intoxicated, unless the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

Act not intended and not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent

12. Nothing which is not intended to cause death, or grievous hurt, and which is not known by the doer to be likely to cause death, or grievous hurt, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, to any person above eighteen years of age, who has given consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm; or by reason of any harm which it may be known by the doer to be likely to cause to any such person who has consented to take the risk of that harm.

Illustration.

A and Z agree to fence with each other for amusement. This agreement implies the consent of each to suffer any harm which, in the course of such fencing, may be caused without foul play; and if A, while playing fairly, hurts Z, A commits no offence.

Act not intended to cause death done by consent in good faith for the benefit of a person.

13. Nothing, which is not intended to cause death, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to any person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, and who has given a consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm, or to take the risk of that harm.

Illustration.

A, a surgeon, knowing that a particular operation is likely to cause the death of Z, who suffers under a painful complaint, but not intending to cause Z's death, and intending, in good faith, Z's benefit, performs that operation on Z, with Z's consent. A has committed no offence.

Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or person of unsound mind by or by consent of guardian.

14. Nothing which is done in good faith for the benefit of a person under twelve years of age, or of unsound mind, by or by consent of the guardian or other person having lawful charge of that person, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to that person : Provided—

Provisoes.

First. That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or to the attempting to cause death :

Secondly. That this exception shall not extend to the doing of any thing which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt ; or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity.

Thirdly. That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of grievous hurt, or to the attempting to cause grievous hurt, unless it be for the purpose of preventing death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity.

Fourthly. That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a parent, whips his child moderately, for the child's benefit. A is within the exception, and therefore has committed no offence.

(b) A, in good faith, for his daughter's benefit, intentionally kills her to prevent her from falling into the hands of Pindarries. A is not within the exception, and is therefore guilty of an offence.

(c) A, in good faith, for his child's benefit, without his child's consent, has his child cut for the stone by a surgeon, knowing it to be likely that the operation will cause the child's death, but not intending to cause the child's death. A is within the exception, inasmuch as his object was the cure of the child.

15. A consent is not such a consent as is intended by Clauses 12, 13, and 14 of this Chapter, or any other Clause of this Code, if the consent is given by a person under fear of injury or under a misconception of fact, and if the person doing the act knows, or has reason to believe, that the consent was given in consequence of such fear or misconception—Or Consent known to be given under fear or misconception.

If the consent is given by a person who is under seven years of age, or who, from immaturity of understanding, unsoundness of mind, or intoxication, is unable to understand the nature and consequence of that to which he gives his consent.

Consent of a child or person of unsound mind.

16. The exceptions in Clauses 12, 13, and 14, of this Chapter, do not extend to acts which are offences independently of any harm which they may cause, or be intended to cause, or be known to be likely to cause, to the person giving the consent, or on whose behalf the consent is given.

Acts which are offences independently of harm caused to the person consenting, are not within the exceptions in Clauses 12, 13, and 14.

Illustration.

Causing miscarriage (unless caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the woman) is an offence independently of harm which it may cause or be intended to cause to the woman. Therefore it is not an offence "by reason of such harm;" and the consent of the woman or of her guardian to the causing of such miscarriage does not justify the act.

17. Nothing is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause to a person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, even without that person's consent, if the circumstances are such that it is impossible for that person to signify consent, or if that person is incapable of giving consent, and has no guardian or other person in lawful charge of him from whom it is possible to obtain consent in time for the thing to be done with benefit. Provided—

Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent.

Provisoes.

First. That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or attempting to cause death.

Secondly. That this exception shall not extend to the doing of any thing which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity.

Thirdly. That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of hurt, or to the attempting to cause hurt, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or hurt.

Fourthly. That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

Illustrations.

(a.) Z is thrown from his horse, and is insensible. A a surgeon, finds that Z requires to be trepanned. A, not intending Z's death, but in good faith, for Z's benefit, performs the trepan before Z recovers his power of judging for himself. A has committed no offence.

(b) Z is carried off by a tiger. A fires at the tiger knowing it to be likely that the shot may kill Z, but not intending to kill Z, and in good faith intending Z's benefit. A's ball gives Z a mortal wound. A has committed no offence.

(c) A, a surgeon, sees a child suffer an accident which is likely to prove fatal unless an operation be immediately performed. There is not time to apply to the child's guardian. A performs the operation in spite of the entreaties of the child, intending, in good faith, the child's benefit. A has committed no offence.

(d) A is in a house which is on fire, with Z, a child. People below hold out a blanket. A drops the child from the house-top, knowing it to be likely that the fall may kill the child, but not intending to kill the child, and intending, in good faith, the child's benefit. Here, even if the child is killed by the fall, A has committed no offence.

Explanation.—Mere pecuniary benefit is not benefit within the meaning of Clauses 13, 14, and 17.

18. No communication made in good faith is an offence by reason of any harm to the person to whom it is made.

Communication made in good faith.

Illustration.

A, a surgeon, in good faith, communicates to a patient his opinion that he cannot live. The patient dies in consequence of the shock. A has committed no offence, though he knew it to be likely that the communication might cause the patient's death.

19. Excepting murder and offences against the State punishable with death, nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is compelled to do it by threats, which, at the time of doing it, reasonably cause the apprehension that instant death to that person will otherwise be the consequence ; provided the person doing the act did not of his own accord, or from a reasonable apprehension of harm to himself short of instant death, place himself in the situation by which he became subject to such constraint.

Act to which a person is compelled by threats.

Explanation 1.—A person who, of his own accord, or by reason of a threat of being beaten, joins a gang of dacoits, or a crew of pirates, or the like, knowing their character, is not entitled to the benefit of this exception, on the ground of his having been compelled by his associates to do any thing that is an offence by law.

Explanation 2.—A person who embarks ignorantly in a piratical vessel, being compelled by the crew, by threat of instant death, to join in an act of piracy, is entitled to the benefit of the exception.

Explanation 3.—So also is a person seized by a gang of dacoits, and forced, by threat of instant death, to do a thing which is an offence by law; for example, a smith compelled to take his tools and to force the door of a house for the dacoits to enter and plunder it.

Act causing slight harm.

20. Nothing is an offence by reason that it causes, or that it is intended to cause, or that it is known to be likely to cause, any harm, if that harm is so slight that no person of ordinary sense and temper would complain of such harm.

Of the Right of Private Defence.

Act done in private defence.

21. Nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence.

Right of private defence.

22. Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in Clause 24, to defend:

First His own body, and the body of any other person, against an assault.

Secondly. The property, whether moveable or immoveable, of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling under the definition of theft, robbery, mischief, or criminal trespass, or which is an attempt to commit theft, robbery, mischief, or criminal trespass.

Right of private defence against the act of a person of unsound mind, &c.

23. When an act which would otherwise be a certain offence, is not that offence by reason of the youth, the want of maturity of understanding, the unsoundness of mind, or the intoxication of the person doing that act, or by reason of any misconception on the part of that person, every person has the same right of private defence against that act which he would have if the act were that offence.

Illustrations.

(a) Z, under the influence of madness, attempts to kill A. Z is guilty of no offence. But A has the same right of private defence which he would have if Z were sane.

(b) A enters by night a house which he is legally entitled to enter. Z, in good faith, taking A for a house-breaker, attacks A. Here Z, by attacking A under this misconception, commits no offence. But A has the same right of private defence against Z, which he would have if Z were acting under no misconception.

Acts against which there is no right of private defence.

24. There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that act may not be strictly justifiable by law.

There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that direction may not be strictly justifiable by law.

There is no right of private defence in cases in which there is time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.

Extent to which the right may be exercised.

The right of private defence in no case extends to the inflicting of more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence.

Explanation 1.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant, as such, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is such public servant.

Explanation 2.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is acting by such direction, or unless such person states the authority under which he acts, or, if he has authority in writing, unless he produces such authority.

When the right of private defence of the body extends to causing death.

25. The right of private defence of the body extends, under the restrictions mentioned in the last preceding Clause, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the assailant, if the assault which occasions the exercise of the right be of any of the descriptions hereinafter enumerated, namely.

First Such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that death will otherwise be the consequence of such assault.

Secondly. Such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that grievous hurt will otherwise be the consequence of such assault.

Thirdly. An assault with the intention of committing rape.

Fourthly. An assault with the intention of gratifying unnatural lust.

Fifthly. An assault with the intention of kidnapping.

Sixthly. An assault with the intention of wrongfully confining a person, under circumstances which may reasonably cause him to apprehend that he will be unable to have recourse to the public authorities for his release.

When such right extends to causing any harm other than death.

26. If the assault be not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding Clause, the right of private defence of the body does not extend to the voluntary causing of death to the assailant, but does extend, under the restrictions mentioned in Clause 24, to the voluntary causing to the assailant of any harm other than death.

Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of the body.

27. The right of private defence of the body commences as soon as a reasonable apprehension of danger to the body commences, though no assault may have been committed; and it continues as long as such apprehension of danger to the body continues.

When the right of private defence of property extends to causing death.

28. The right of private defence of property extends, under the restrictions mentioned in Clause 24, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the wrongdoer, if the offence, the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right, be an offence of any of the descriptions hereinafter enumerated, namely:

First. Robbery.

Secondly. House-breaking by night, or lurking house-trespass by night.

Thirdly. Mischief by fire committed on any building, tent, or vessel, which building, tent, or vessel is used as a human dwelling, or as a place for the custody of property.

Fourthly. Theft, mischief, or house-trespass, under such circumstances as may reasonably cause apprehension that death or grievous hurt will be the consequence, if such right of private defence is not exercised.

When such right extends to causing any harm other than death.

29. If the offence, the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right of private defence, be theft, mischief, or criminal trespass, not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding Clause, that right does not extend to the voluntary causing of death, but does extend, subject to the restrictions mentioned in Clause 24, to the voluntary causing to the wrong-doer of any harm other than death.

Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of property.

30. The right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences.

The right of private defence of property against theft or robbery continues till either the assistance of the public authorities can be obtained, or the property has been recovered.

The right of private defence of property against criminal trespass or mischief continues as long as the offender continues in the commission of criminal trespass or mischief, or as long as a reasonable ground of apprehension of danger to the property continues.

The right of private defence of property against house-breaking by night, or lurking house-trespass by night, continues as long as the house-trespass, which has been begun by such house-breaking or lurking house-trespass, continues.

Right of private defence against a deadly assault when there is risk of harm to an innocent person.

31. If, in exercise of the right of private defence against an assault which reasonably causes the apprehension of death, the defender be so situated that he cannot effectually exercise that right without risk of harm to an innocent person, his right of private defence extends to the running of that risk.

Illustration.

A is attacked by a mob who attempt to murder him. He cannot effectually exercise his right of private defence without firing on the mob, and he cannot fire without risk of harming young children who are mingled with the mob. A commits no offence if by so firing he harms any of the children.

Chapter V.

OF PRINCIPALS AND ABETTORS.

Principal.

1. A person is a principal in an offence who, either singly or jointly with any other person, actually commits that offence, or who abets* the commission thereof, and is present when the act abetted is committed, and is capable of taking a part therein.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B waylay Z and murder him to death by beating him, each of them giving him several blows. A and B are principals in the murder, for they both join in actually committing it.

(b) A, being in the presence of B and Z, instigates B to murder Z. B, in consequence of such instigation, murders Z in A's presence. Here, as A is present when the murder is committed and abets by instigation that murder, A and B are principals in the murder.

(c) A and B conspire to murder Z. A, in pursuance of that conspiracy, stabs Z and thereby murders him in B's presence. Here, as B abets by conspiracy the murder committed in his presence, both B and A are principals.

(d) A and B agree to murder Z. A binds Z to a tree, and B then, in A's presence, stabs him with a sword. Here A abets by aid the murder of Z, and as that murder is committed in his presence, both A and B are principals.

(e) A abets B to give false evidence in a Court of Justice B, in consequence of A's instigation, gives false evidence. Here, notwithstanding A may be present in Court when the false evidence is given, he is not a principal, but only an abettor, inasmuch as he was not capable of taking a part in B's act of giving evidence.

Explanation 1.—When the act is committed in consequence of the abetment, it is not necessary, in order to render the abettor liable, that the person committing the act should be capable by law of committing an offence, or that he should commit the act with the same guilty intention or knowledge as that of the abettor, or with any guilty knowledge or intention.

Illustrations.

(a) A, having such an intention as would render the killing of Z murder if A committed the act himself, instigates B, a madman, to commit that act. B, in consequence of such instigation, kills Z in A's presence. Here, A abets the offence of murder (see Clause 4); and as the act abetted was committed by B in his presence, A is a principal in the murder, though B was not guilty of any offence.

(b) A, a prisoner confined in a cell in Jail, instigates B, a prisoner who is outside the cell, to murder Z, the Jailor. B commits the offence in consequence of the instigation. Here, if A was not capable of taking part in the act in consequence of his confinement, he is not a principal, but only an abettor.

Explanation 2.—Where there are several principals, in the commission of a criminal act, they may be guilty of different offences by means of that act.

Illustration.

A attacks Z under such circumstances of grave provocation that his killing of Z would be only culpable homicide. B, having ill-will towards Z, and not having been subject to the provocation, assists A in killing Z. Here, though A and B are both principals in causing Z's death, B is guilty of murder, and A is guilty only of culpable homicide.

Principal by doing one of several acts constituting an offence.

2. When an offence is committed by means of several acts, whoever voluntarily co-operates in the commission of that offence by actually doing any one of those acts either singly or jointly with any other person, or by abetting such act and being present when it is done, and capable of taking a part therein, is a principal in the offence.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B agree to murder Z by severally and at different times giving him small doses of poison. A and B administer the poison according to the agreement. Z dies from the effects of the several doses of poison so administered to him. Here A and B voluntarily co-operate in the commission of murder, and as each of them does an act by which the death is caused, they are both principals, though their acts are separate.

(b) A and B are joint Jailors, and as such, have the charge of Z, a prisoner, alternately for six hours at a time. A and B, intending to cause Z's death, knowingly co-operate in causing that effect by illegally omitting, each during the time of his attendance, to furnish Z with food. Z dies of hunger. Both A and B are principals in the murder of Z.

(c) A, a Jailor, has the charge of Z, a prisoner. A, intending to cause Z's death, illegally omits to supply Z with food; in consequence of which Z is much reduced in strength, but the starvation is not sufficient to cause his death. A is dismissed from his office, and B succeeds him. B, without collusion or co-operation with A, illegally omits to supply Z with food, knowing that he is likely thereby to cause Z's death. Z dies of hunger. B is guilty of murder; but as A did not co-operate with B, A is guilty only of an attempt to commit murder.

Explanation 1.—A person is said to be present within the meaning of the Clauses 1 and 2 of this Chapter who is near enough to render assistance to the person who does the act.

Explanation 2.—When the causing of a particular effect is necessary to constitute an offence, a person may be a principal in the commission of the offence, although not present when the effect is caused.

Illustrations.

(a) A lays poison for the purpose of poisoning Z. Z takes the poison and dies in consequence in the absence of A. A is a principal in the murder of Z, notwithstanding he was not present when the poison was taken, or the murder was consummated by Z's death.

* As to what amounts to abetment of an offence—See Clause 4 and Explanations.

(b) A instigates B to lay poison with the intention of poisoning Z, and is present when B lays it with that intent. Z, in the absence of A and B, takes the poison and dies in consequence. A and B are both principals in the murder of Z, though they were both absent when the effect was caused.

Abetment.

3. A person abets the doing of a thing, who,

First.—Instigates any person to do that thing, or

Secondly.—Engages in any conspiracy for the doing of that thing, if an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of that conspiracy, and in order to the doing of that thing, or

Thirdly.—Intentionally aids, by any act or illegal omission, the doing of that thing.

Explanation 1.—A person is said to instigate the doing of a thing who, by wilful misrepresentation or by wilful concealment of a material fact which he is bound to disclose, or otherwise, voluntarily causes or procures, or attempts to cause or procure, that thing to be done.

Illustration.

A, a public officer, is authorized by a warrant from a Court of Justice to apprehend Z. B, knowing that fact and also that C is not Z, wilfully represents to A that C is Z, and thereby intentionally causes A to apprehend C. Here B abets by instigation the apprehension of C.

Explanation 2.—Whoever, prior to or at the time of the commission of an act, does any thing in order to facilitate the commission of that act, and thereby facilitates the commission thereof, is said to aid the doing of that act.

Abettor.

4. A person is said to abet an offence who abets either the commission of an offence, or the commission of an act which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence with the intention or knowledge of the abettor.

Explanation 1.—A person may be guilty of abetting an offence by abetting the illegal omission of an act, by a person legally bound to do the act, although he may not himself be legally bound to do that act.

Illustration.

A instigates B to take a horse out of Z's possession, knowing that the horse belongs to Z and intending that B shall steal the horse. Here A abets the offence of theft, for he with the intention and knowledge which is necessary to constitute the taking a theft, abets that taking.

Explanation 2.—A person may be guilty of abetting an offence, although the act abetted be not committed; or the effect necessary to constitute the offence be not caused. In such case he will be punishable under Clauses 12 and 13 of this Chapter.

Explanation 3.—It is not necessary that the person abetted should be capable by law of committing an offence, or that he should have the same guilty intention or knowledge as that of the abettor, or any guilty intention or knowledge.

Illustration.

A, with a guilty intention, abets a child or a lunatic to commit an act which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence, and having the same intention as A. Here A, whether the act be committed or not, is guilty of abetting an offence. If the act be committed, he is punishable under Clause 5 of this Chapter; if the act be not committed, he is punishable under Clause 12 or 13 of this Chapter.

Punishment of abetment if the act abetted is committed in consequence, and where no express provision is made for its punishment.

5. Whoever abets any offence shall, if the act abetted is committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence, although he may not be a principal.

Illustrations.

(a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant. B accepts the bribe. A has abetted the offence defined under Clause 1 Chapter IX.

(b) A instigates B to give false evidence. B, in consequence of the instigation, commits that offence. A is guilty of abetting that offence, and is liable to the same punishment as B.

(c) A and B conspire to poison Z. A, in pursuance of the conspiracy, procures the poison and delivers it to B in order that he may administer it to Z. B, in pursuance of the conspiracy, administers the poison to Z in A's absence and thereby causes Z's death. Here B is guilty of murder. A is guilty of abetting that offence by conspiracy, and is liable to the punishment for murder.

Explanation 1.—It is not necessary that the person committing the act should be capable by law of committing an offence, or that he should commit the act with the same intention or knowledge as that of the abettor, or that by committing the act he should be guilty of any offence.

Illustrations.

(a) A, with the intention of murdering Z, instigates B, a child under seven years of age, to do an act which causes Z's death. B, in consequence of the abetment, does the act in the absence of A and thereby causes Z's death. Here, though B was not capable by law of committing an offence, A is liable to be punished in the same manner as if B had been capable by law of committing an offence, and had committed murder, and he is therefore subject to the punishment of death. If, in such a case, B does the act in the presence of A, A is a principal.

(b) A, with the intention of causing Z's property to be taken, fraudulently instigates B, a child under seven years of age, to take that property in a way which, in a grown-up person, would be the offence of theft. B takes the property in consequence. B has committed no offence, bu A is liable to the same punishment as if B had committed theft.

(c) A instigates B to set fire to a dwelling house. B, in consequence of the unsoundness of his mind, being incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is wrong or contrary to law, sets fire to the house in consequence of A's instigation. B has committed no offence, but A is guilty of abetting the offence of setting fire to a dwelling house, and is liable to the punishment provided for that offence.

(d) A, intending to cause a theft to be committed, instigates B to take property belonging to Z out of Z's possession. A induces B to believe that the property belongs to A. B takes the property out of Z's possession, in good faith believing it to be A's property. B, acting under this misconception, does not take fraudulently, and therefore does not commit theft. But A is guilty of abetting theft, and is liable to the same punishment as if B had committed theft.

Explanation 2.—The abetment of an offence being an offence, the abetment of such an abetment is also an offence.

Illustration.

A instigates B to instigate C to murder Z. B accordingly instigates C to murder Z, and C commits that offence in consequence of B's instigation. B is liable to be punished for his offence with the punishment for murder, and as A instigated B to commit the offence, A is also liable to the same punishment.

Explanation 3.—An act or offence is said to be committed in consequence of abetment, when it is committed in consequence of the instigation, or in pursuance of the conspiracy, or with the aid which constitutes the abetment.

Explanation 4.—It is not necessary to the commission of the offence of abetment by conspiracy that the abettor should concert the offence with the person who commits it. It is sufficient if he engage in the conspiracy in pursuance of which the offence is committed.

Illustration.

A concerts with B a plan for poisoning Z. It is agreed that A shall administer the poison. B then explains the plan to C, mentioning that a third person is to administer the poison, but without mentioning A's name. C agrees to procure the poison and procures and delivers it to B for the purpose of its being used in the manner explained. A administers the poison; Z dies in consequence. Here, though A and C have not conspired together, yet C has been engaged in the conspiracy in pursuance of which Z has been murdered. C has therefore committed the offence defined in this Clause and is liable to the punishment for murder.

6. Whoever abets the commission of an offence shall, if the person abetted does the act with a different intention or knowledge from that of the abettor, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence which would have been committed if the act had been done with the intention or knowledge of the abettor and with no other.

Punishment of abetment if the person abetted does the act with a different intention from that of the abettor.

7. When an act is abetted and a different act is done, the abettor is liable for the act done, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had directly abetted it; provided the act done was a natural and probable consequence of the abetment, and was committed under the influence of the instigation, or with the aid or in pursuance of the conspiracy which constituted the abetment.

Liability of abettor when one act is abetted and a different act is done.

Proviso.

Illustrations.

(a) A instigates a child to put poison into the food of Z and gives him poison for that purpose. The child, in consequence of the instigation, by mistake puts the poison into the food of Y, which is by the side of that of Z. Here, if the child was acting under the influence of A's instigation and the act done was under the circumstances a probable consequence of the abetment, A is liable in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had instigated the child to put the poison into the food of Y.

(b) A instigates B to burn Z's house. B sets fire to the house and at the same time commits theft of property there. A, though guilty of abetting the burning of the house, is not guilty of abetting the theft; for the theft was a distinct act and not a probable consequence of the burning.

(c) A instigates B and C to break into an inhabited house at midnight for the purpose of robbery, and provides them with arms for that purpose. B and C break into the house, and being resisted by Z, one of the inmates, murder Z. Here, if that murder was the probable consequence of the abetment A is liable to the punishment provided for murder.

8. If the act for which the abettor is liable under the last preceding Clause is committed in addition to the act abetted and constitutes a distinct offence, the abettor is liable to cumulative punishment.

Abettor when liable to cumulative punishment for act abetted and for act done.

Illustration.

A instigates B to resist by force a distress made by a public servant. B, in consequence, resists that distress. In offering the resistance, B voluntarily causes grievous hurt to the officer executing the distress. As B has committed both the offence of resisting the distress and the offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt, B is liable to cumulative punishment for these offences; and if A knew that B was likely voluntarily to cause grievous hurt in resisting the distress, A will also be liable to cumulative punishment.

9. When an act is abetted with the intention on the part of the abettor of causing a particular effect, or with the knowledge that it is likely to cause that effect, and the act being done in consequence of the abetment, causes a different effect from that intended, or known by the abettor to be likely to be caused by the act abetted, the abettor is liable for the effect caused, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had abetted the act with the intention of causing that effect, or with the knowledge that it was likely to cause that effect, provided the effect caused was a natural and probable consequence of the act abetted.

Liability of abettor for an effect caused by the act abetted different from that intended by the abettor.

But it does appear that A accepted the sum as a motive or a reward for generally shewing favor in the exercise of his official functions to that power. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

Chapter XVI.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING THE HUMAN BODY.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING LIFE.

1. WHOEVER causes death by doing an act with the intention of causing death, or with the intention of causing such bodily injury as likely to cause death, or with the knowledge that he is likely by such act to cause death, commits the offence of culpable homicide.

Culpable homicide.

Illustrations.

(a) A lays sticks and turf over a pit, with the intention of thereby causing death or with the knowledge that death is likely to be thereby caused. Z, believing the ground to be firm, treads on it, falls in, and is killed. A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(b) A, with the intention or knowledge aforesaid, relates agitating tidings to Z, who is in a critical stage of a dangerous illness. Z dies in consequence A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(c) A with the intention or knowledge aforesaid, threatens to cause the instant death of Z, unless Z jumps out of a window. Z jumps out of the window in consequence of the threat and thereby kills himself. A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(d) A is hired to guide Z through a jungle. In the midst of the jungle, A, no circumstance having occurred to release him from his legal obligation to guide Z through the jungle, leaves Z in the jungle with the knowledge that Z is likely to be lost in the jungle and starved to death in consequence. Z is lost in the jungle and starved to death in consequence. A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(e) A knows Z to be behind a bush. B does not know it. A, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely to cause Z's death, induces B to fire at the bush. B fires and kills Z. Here B may be guilty of no offence; but A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

Explanation 1. A person who causes bodily injury to another who is labouring under a disorder, disease, or bodily infirmity, and thereby accelerates the death of that other, shall be deemed to have caused his death.

Explanation 2. Where death is caused by bodily injury, the person who causes such bodily injury shall be deemed to have caused the death, although by resorting to proper remedies and skilful treatment the death might have been prevented.

Explanation 3. The causing of the death of a child in the mother's womb is not homicide. But it may amount to culpable homicide to cause the death of a living child if any part of that child has been brought forth, though the child may not have breathed or been completely born.

2. Except in the cases hereinafter excepted, culpable homicide is murder if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death, or—

Murder.

2*ndly*. If it is done with the intention of causing such bodily injury as the offender knows to be likely to cause the death of the person to whom the harm is caused, or—

3*rdly*. If it is done with the intention of causing bodily injury to any person and the bodily harm intended to be inflicted is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, or—

4*thly*. If the person committing the act knows that it is so imminently dangerous that it must in all probability cause death or such bodily injury as is likely to cause death, and commits such act without any excuse for incurring the risk of causing death or such injury as aforesaid and under circumstances which indicate a depraved mind regardless of human life.

Illustrations.

(a) A shoots Z with the intention of killing him. Z dies in consequence. A commits murder

(b) A, knowing that Z is labouring under such a disease that a blow on a particular part of his body is likely to cause his death, strikes him on that particular part of his body with intention of causing bodily injury. Z dies in consequence of the blow. A is guilty of murder, although the blow might not have been sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause the death of a person in a sound state of health. But if A, not knowing that Z is labouring under any disease, gives him such a blow as would not in the ordinary course of nature kill a person in a sound state of health, here A, although he may intend to cause bodily injury, is not guilty of murder if he did not intend to cause death.

(c) A gives Z sword-cuts and club-wounds sufficient to cause the death of a man in the ordinary course of nature. Z dies in consequence. Here if A intended to cause that degree of bodily injury to Z which he inflicted, A is guilty of murder, although it may not be proved that A intended to cause Z's death.

(d) A without any excuse fires a loaded cannon into a crowd of persons and kills one of them, A is guilty of murder although he may not have had a premeditated design to kill any particular individual.

Exception 1. Culpable homicide is not murder if the offender, whilst deprived of the power of self-control by the excitement of fear or anger caused by grave and sudden provocation, causes the death of the person who gave the provocation, or causes the death of any other person by mistake or accident in doing an act caused by such fear or anger.

When culpable homicide is not murder.

The above exception is subject to the following provisoes.

First. That the provocation is not sought or voluntarily provoked by the offender as an excuse for killing or doing harm to any person.

Secondly. That the provocation is not given by any thing done in obedience to the law or by a public servant in the lawful exercise of the powers of such public servant.

Thirdly. That the provocation is not given by any thing done in the lawful exercise of the right of private defence.

Explanation. Whether the provocation was grave enough or the passion of fear or anger sudden enough to prevent the offence from amounting to murder is a question of fact.

Illustrations.

(a) A, under the influence of passion excited by a provocation given by Z, intentionally kills Y, Z's child. This is murder, inasmuch as the provocation was not given by the child and the death of the child was not caused by accident or misfortune in doing an act caused by the provocation.

(b) Y gives grave and sudden provocation to A. A, on this provocation, fires a pistol at Y, neither intending or knowing himself to be likely to kill Z, who is near him, but out of sight. A kills Z. Here A has not committed murder but merely culpable homicide.

(c) A is lawfully arrested by Z, a bailiff. A is excited to sudden and violent passion by the arrest, and voluntarily kills Z. This is murder, inasmuch as the provocation was given by a thing done by a public servant in obedience to the law.

(d) A appears as a witness before Z, a Magistrate. Z says that he does not believe a word of A's deposition and that A has perjured himself. A is moved to sudden passion by these words and kills Z. This is murder.

(e) A attempts to pull Z's nose. Z, in the exercise of the right of private defence, lays hold of A to prevent him from doing so. A is moved to sudden and violent passion in consequence, and kills Z. This is murder, inasmuch as the provocation was given by a thing done in the exercise of the right of private defence.

(f) Z strikes B. B is by this provocation excited to violent rage. A, a by-stander, intending to take advantage of B's rage, and to cause him to kill Z, puts a knife into B's hand for that purpose. B kills Z with the knife. Here B may have committed only culpable homicide, but A is guilty of murder.

Exception 2. Culpable homicide is not murder if the offender in the exercise of the right of private defence of person or property exceeds the power given to him by law and causes the death of the person against whom he is exercising such right of defence without premeditation, and without any intention of doing more harm than is necessary for the purpose of such defence.

Illustration

Z attempts to horsewhip A, not in such a manner as to cause grievous hurt to A. A draws out a pistol. Z persists in the assault. A believing in good faith that he can by no other means prevent himself from being horse-whipped, shoots Z dead. A has not committed murder, but only culpable homicide.

Exception 3. Culpable homicide is not murder if the offender, being a public servant, acting for the advancement of public justice, exceeds the powers given to him by law and causes death by doing an act which he in good faith believes to be necessary for the due discharge of his duty as such public servant and without ill-will towards the person whose death is caused.

Exception 4. Culpable homicide is not murder if it is committed without premeditation in a sudden fight in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel and without the offender's having taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner.

Explanation. It is immaterial in such cases which party offers the provocation or commits the first assault.

Exception 5. Culpable homicide is not murder when the person whose death is caused, being above the age of eighteen years, suffers death or takes the risk of death with his own consent.

Explanation 1. A consent is not within the meaning of this exception if it is given by a person under fear of injury, or under a misconception of fact, and if the offender knows or has reason to believe that the consent is given in consequence of such fear or misconception.

Explanation 2. Culpable homicide committed by a person who voluntarily puts himself to death is within this exception.

Illustrations.

(a) A, by instigation, voluntarily causes Z, a person under eighteen years of age, to commit suicide. Here, on account of Z's youth, he was incapable of giving consent to his own death; A has therefore abetted murder.

(b) A, by intentionally deceiving Z, who is laboring under a painful disease, and inducing him to believe that his disease is incurable, when A knows that it is not so, voluntarily causes Z to commit suicide. Here, on account of the deception practised by A, the offence cannot be culpable homicide by consent. A has therefore abetted murder.

(c) A by instigation voluntarily causes Z, a person above eighteen years of age, to put himself to death. A has abetted culpable homicide, but not murder.

Culpable homicide by causing the death of a person other than the person whose death was intended.

3. If a person, by doing any thing which he intends or knows to be likely to cause death, commits culpable homicide by causing the death of any person whose death he neither intends nor knows himself to be likely to cause, the culpable homicide committed by the offender is of the description of which it would have been if he had caused the death of the person whose death he intended or knew himself to be likely to cause.

4. Whoever commits murder shall be punished with death, or transportation for life, and shall also be liable to fine.

6. Abetment of suicide of child or insane person.

7. If any person under eighteen years of age, any insane person, any delirious person, any idiot, or any person in a state of intoxication commits suicide, whoever abets the commission of such suicide shall be punished with death or transportation for life or imprisonment for a term not exceeding fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Illustrations.

(a) A shoots at Z with intention to kill him, under such circumstances that, if death ensued, A would be guilty of murder. A is liable to punishment under this Clause

(b) A intending to murder Z by means of a spring gun, purchases such a gun; A has not yet committed the offence defined in this Clause. A sets the gun loaded in Z's path, and leaves it there. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause

(c) A intending to murder Z by poison purchases poison and mixes the same with food which remains in A's keeping; A has not yet committed the offence in this Clause. A places the food on Z's table or delivers it to Z's servants to place it on Z's table A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

Attempt to commit culpable homicide.

10. Whoever attempts to commit culpable homicide and does any act with such intention or knowledge and under such circumstances that if he by that act or omission caused death, he would be guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or both; and if hurt is caused to any person by such act, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or both.

Illustrations.

(a) A, on grave and sudden provocation, fires a pistol at Z, under such circumstances that if he thereby caused death he would be guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

(b) A pursues a thief and fires at him under such circumstances that if he killed the thief he would commit culpable homicide in defence. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

Whoever commits the offence defined in the last preceding Clause without the consent of the woman, whether the woman is quick with child or not, shall be punished with transportation for life or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Consent given through fear of injury.

A consent is not within the meaning of this Clause if it is given by a person under fear of injury or under a misconception of fact, and if the person committing the offence knows or has reason to believe that the consent was given in consequence of such fear or misconception.

16. Whoever, with intent to cause the miscarriage of a woman with child, does any act which causes the death of such woman, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and if the act is done without the consent of the woman, shall be punished either with transportation for life or with the punishment above-mentioned.

Explanation. It is not essential to this offence that the offender should know that the act is likely to cause death.

Act done with intent to prevent a child being born alive or to cause it to die after birth.

17. Whoever before the birth of any child does any act with the intention of thereby preventing that child from being born alive or causing it to die after its birth, and does by such act prevent that child from being born alive or causes it to die after its birth, shall, if such act be not caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the mother, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, or with fine, or both.

Illustration.

A, knowing that he is likely to cause the death of a pregnant woman, does an act which, if it caused the death of the woman, would amount to culpable homicide. Illustrations.

(a) A causes Z to go within a walled space, and locks Z in. Z is thus prevented from proceeding in any direction beyond the circumscribing line of wall. A wrongfully confines Z.

(b) In the last illustration, if there is in some nook of the walled space a door which is not secured, but which may easily escape observation, if A voluntarily cause it to appear to Z to be impossible to proceed beyond the line of wall, A has wrongfully confined Z.

(c) A places men with fire arms at the outlets of a building and tells Z that they will fire at Z, if Z attempts to leave the building. A wrongfully confines Z.

Wrongful confinement and omission to furnish to person confined a certain thing necessary to prevent death or hurt.

Illustration.

Z's eyes are in such a state as to require constant medical care. A wrongfully confines Z, and knowing that without medical attendance Z is likely to lose his eye-sight, omits to procure such medical attendance. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause. If Z loses his eye-sight, A has by an illegal omission voluntarily caused Z to lose his eye-sight, and has thus become liable to the punishment of having voluntarily caused grievous hurt to Z.

OF CRIMINAL FORCE AND ASSAULT

52. A person is said to use force to another if he causes motion, change of motion, or cessation of motion to that other, or if he causes to any substance such motion, or change of motion, or cessation of motion as brings that substance into contact with any part of that other's body, or with any thing which that other is wearing or carrying or with anything so situated that such contact affects that other's sense of feeling: provided that the person causing the motion, or change of motion, or cessation of motion, causes that motion, change of motion, or cessation of motion in one of the three ways hereinafter described.

Force.

First.—By his own bodily power.

Secondly.—By disposing any substance in such a manner that the motion or change or cessation of motion takes place without any further act on his part, or on the part of any other person.

Thirdly. By inducing any animal to move, to change its motion, or to cease to move.

53. Whoever intentionally uses force to any person, without that person's consent, in order to the committing of any offence, or intending by the use of such force to cause, or knowing it to be likely that by the use of such force he will cause injury, fear, or annoyance to the person to whom the force is used, is said to use criminal force to that other.

Criminal force.

Illustrations.

(a) Z is sitting in a moored boat on a river. A unfastens the moorings, and thus intentionally causes the boat to drift down the stream. Here A intentionally causes motion to Z, and he does this by disposing substances in such a manner that the motion is produced without any other act on any person's part. A has therefore intentionally used force to Z; and if he has done so without Z's consent, in order to the committing of any offence, or intending or knowing it to be likely that this use of force may cause injury, fear, or annoyance to Z, A has used criminal force to Z.

(b) Z is riding in a chariot. A lashes Z's horses, and thereby causes them to quicken their pace. Here A has caused change of motion to Z by inducing animals to change their motion. A has therefore used force to Z, and if A has done this without Z's consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby injure, frighten, or annoy Z, A has committed criminal force to Z.

(c) Z is riding in a palanquin. A, intending to rob Z, seizes the pole, and stops the palanquin. Here A has caused cessation of motion to Z, and he has done this by his own bodily power. A has therefore used force to Z; and as A has acted thus intentionally, without Z's consent, in order to the commission of an offence, A has used criminal force to Z.

(d) A intentionally pushes against Z in the street. Here A has by his own bodily power moved his own person so as to bring it into contact with Z: he has therefore intentionally used force to Z; and if he has done so without Z's consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby injure, frighten, or annoy Z, he has used criminal force to Z.

(e) A throws a stone intending or knowing it to be likely that the stone will be thus brought into contact with Z, or with Z's clothes, or with something carried by Z, or that it will strike water, and dash up the water against Z's clothes, or something carried by Z. Here, if the throwing of the stone produce the effect of causing any substance to come into contact with Z or Z's clothes, A has used force to Z; and if he did so without Z's consent, intending thereby to injure, frighten, or annoy Z, he has used criminal force to Z.

(f) A intentionally pulls up a woman's veil. Here A intentionally uses force to her; and if he does so without her consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby injure, frighten, or annoy her, he has used criminal force to her.

(g) Z is bathing. A pours into the bath water which he knows to be boiling. Here A intentionally by his own bodily power causes such motion in the boiling water as brings that water into contact with Z, or with other water so situated hat such contact must affect Z's sense of feeling: A h herefore intentionally used force to Z; and if he has done this without Z's consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause injury, fear, or annoyance to Z, A has used criminal force.

(h) A incites a dog to spring upon Z, without Z's consent. Here, if A intends to cause injury, fear, or annoyance to Z, he uses criminal force to Z.

Assault.

54. Whoever makes any gesture, or any preparation, intending or knowing it to be likely that by such gesture or preparation he may cause any person present to apprehend that he who makes that gesture or preparation is about to use force to that other and thereby to affect that other's sense of feeling by bringing any substance into contact with any part of that other's body or any thing which that other is wearing, carrying, or using, is said to commit an assault.

Explanation. Mere words do not amount to an assault. But the words which a person uses may give to his gestures or preparations such a meaning as may make those gestures or preparations amount to an assault.

Illustrations.

(a) A shakes his fist at Z, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause Z to believe that A is about to strike Z. A has committed an assault.

(b) A begins to unloose the muzzle of a ferocious dog, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause to believe that he is about to cause the dog to attack Z. A has committed an assault upon Z.

(c) A takes up a stick, saying to Z, "I will give you a beating." Here, though the words used by A could in no case amount to an assault, and though the mere gesture unaccompanied by any other circumstances, might not amount to an assault, the gesture explained by the words may amount to an assault.

Punishment for using criminal force otherwise than on grave provocation.

Chapter XVII.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY.

OF THEFT.

1. Whoever, intending to take fraudulently any moveable property out of the possession of any person without that person's consent, moves that property in order to such taking, is said to commit theft.

Theft.

Explanation 1. A thing so long as it is attached to the earth, not being moveable property, is not the subject of theft ; but it becomes capable of being the subject of theft as soon as it is severed from the earth.

Explanation 2. A thing, which is attached to the earth, becomes capable of being the subject of theft as soon as it is severed from the earth.

Explanation 3. A moving, effected by the same act which effects the severance, may be a theft.

Explanation 4. A person is said to cause a thing to move by removing an obstacle which prevented it from moving, or by separating it from any other thing, as well as by actually moving it.

Explanation 5. A person, who by any means causes an animal to move, is said to move that animal, and to move every thing which, in consequence of the motion so caused, is moved by that animal.

Explanation 6. The consent mentioned in the definition may be express, or implied, and may be given either by the person in possession, or by any person having for that purpose authority either express or implied.

Illustrations.

(a) A cuts down a tree on Z's ground, with the intention of fraudulently taking the tree out of Z's possession, without Z's consent. Here, as soon as A has severed the tree, in order to such taking, he has committed theft.

(b) A puts a bait for dogs in his pocket, and thus induces Z's dog to follow it. Here, if A's intention be fraudulently to take the dog out of Z's possession without Z's consent. A has committed theft as soon as Z's dog has began to follow A.

(c) A drives Z's sheep before him, with the intention of fraudulently taking them out of Z's possession, without Z's consent. As soon as any sheep begins to move in the direction in which A intended that it should move, A has committed theft.

(d) A meets a bullock carrying a box of treasure. He drives the bullock in a certain direction, in order that he may fraudulently take the treasure. As soon as the bullock begins to move, A has committed theft on the treasure.

(e) A being Z's servant and intrusted by Z with the care of Z's plate, fraudulently runs away with the plate, without Z's consent. Here, the plate, till carried off by A, was still in Z's possession, though it was also in A's possession. A has therefore committed theft.

(f) Z, going on a journey, entrusts his plate to A, the keeper of a warehouse, till Z shall return. A carries the plate to a gold smith and sells it. Here, the plate was not in Z's possession. It could not therefore be taken out of Z's possession, and A has not committed theft, though he may have committed criminal breach of trust.

(g) A finds a ring belonging to Z on a table in the house which Z occupies. Here, the ring is in Z's possession, and if A fraudulently removes it, A commits theft.

(h) A finds a ring lying on the high-road, not in the possession of any person. A by taking it commits no theft, though he may commit criminal misappropriation of property.

(i) A sees a ring belonging to Z lying on a table in Z's house. Not venturing to misappropriate the ring immediately for fear of search and detection, A hides the ring in a place where it is highly improbable that it will ever be found by Z, with the intention of taking the ring from the hiding place, and selling it when the loss is forgotten. Here A, at the time of first moving the ring, commits theft.

(j) A delivers his watch to Z, a jeweller, to be regulated. Z carries it to his shop. A, not owing to the jeweller any debt for which the jeweller might lawfully detain the watch as a security, enters the shop openly, takes his watch by force out of Z's hand, and carries it away. Here A, though he may have committed criminal trespass, and assault, has not committed theft, inasmuch as what he did was not done fraudulently.

(k) If A owes money to Z for repairing the watch, and if Z retains the watch lawfully as a security for the debt, and A takes the watch out of Z's possession, with the intention of keeping Z out of the money due to him, he commits theft, inasmuch as he takes it fraudulently.

(l) Again if A, having pawned his watch to Z, takes it out of Z's possession without Z's consent, not having paid what he had borrowed on the watch, he commits theft though the watch is his own property, inasmuch as he takes it fraudulently.

(m) A takes an article belonging to Z out of Z's possession, without Z's consent, with the intention of keeping it until he obtains money from Z as a reward for its restoration. Here, A takes fraudulently; A has therefore committed theft.

(n) A, being exasperated at a passage in a book which is lying on the counter of Z, a bookseller, snatches it up, and tears it to pieces. A has not committed theft, as he has not acted fraudulently, though he may have committed criminal trespass and mischief.

(o) A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent for the purpose merely of reading it, and with the intention of returning it. Here, it is probable that A may have conceived that he had Z's implied consent to use Z's book. If this was A's impression, A has not committed theft.

(p) A asks charity from Z's wife. She gives A money, food, and clothes, which A knows to belong to Z her husband. Here, it is probable that A may conceive that Z's wife is authorized to give away alms. If this was A's impression, A has not committed theft.

(q) A is the paramour of Z's wife. She gives A valuable property which A knows to belong to her husband Z, and to be such property as she has not authority from Z to give. If A takes the property, he commits theft.

(r) A in good faith believing property belonging to Z to be A's own property, takes that property out of B's possession. Here, as A does not take fraudulently, he does not commit theft.

Punishment for theft.

2. Whoever commits theft shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or both.

Theft by clerk or servant of property in possession of master.

3. Whoever being a clerk or servant, or being employed in the capacity of a clerk or servant, commits theft in respect of any property in the possession of his master or employer, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine or both.

Theft after preparation made for causing death or hurt in order to the committing of the theft.

4. Whoever commits theft, having made preparation for causing death, or hurt, or restraint, or fear of death, or of hurt, or of restraint to any person, in order to the committing of such theft, or in order to the effecting of his escape after the committing of such theft, or in order to the retaining of property taken by such theft, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Illustrations.

(a) A commits theft on property in Z's possession; and, while committing this theft, he has a loaded pistol under his garment, having provided this pistol for the purpose of hurting or terrifying Z in case Z should resist. A has committed the offence defined in this Clause.

OF ROBBERY AND DACOITY

Robbery.

12. In all robbery there is either theft or extortion.

When theft is robbery.

Theft is "robbery", if, in order to the committing of the theft, or in committing the theft, or in carrying away or attempting to carry away property obtained by theft, the offender, for that end, voluntarily causes or attempts to cause to any person death or hurt or wrongful restraint or fear of instant death or of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint.

When extortion is robbery.

Extortion is "robbery", if the offender, at the time of committing the extortion, is in the presence of the person put in fear, and commits the extortion by putting that person in fear of instant death, of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint to that person, or to some other person present at the time of committing the extortion, and, by so putting in fear, induces the person so put in fear then and there to deliver up any property.

Illustrations.

(a) A holds Z down, and fraudulently takes Z's money and jewels from Z's clothes, without Z's consent. Here, A has committed theft, and, in order to the committing of that theft, has voluntarily caused wrongful restraint to Z. A has therefore committed robbery.

(b) A meets Z on the high road, shews a pistol, and demands Z's purse. Z surrenders his purse. Here, A has extorted the purse from Z by putting him in fear of instant hurt, and being at the time of committing the extortion in his presence. A has therefore committed robbery.

(c) A meets Z, and Z's child, on the high road. A takes the child, and threatens to fling it down a precipice, unless Z delivers his purse. Z delivers his purse. Here A has extorted the purse from Z, by causing Z to be in fear of instant hurt to the child who is there present. A has therefore committed robbery on Z.

(d) A obtains property from Z by saying—"your child is in the hands of my gang, and will be put to death unless you send us ten thousand Rupees." This is extortion, and punishable as such; but it is not robbery.

Dacoity.

13. When five or more persons, conjointly, commit or attempt to commit a robbery, or where the whole number of persons conjointly committing or attempting to commit a robbery, and persons present and aiding such commission or attempt, amount to five or more, every person so committing, attempting, or aiding, is said to commit "Dacoity."

Fraudulent misappropriation of property.

Illustrations.

(a) A takes property belonging to Z out of Z's possession, in good faith believing, at the time when he takes it, that the property belongs to himself. A is not guilty of theft; but if A, after discovering his mistake, fraudulently appropriates the property to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

(b) A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent. Here, if A was under the impression that he had Z's implied consent to take the book for the purpose of reading it, A has not committed theft. But if A afterwards sells the book for his own benefit, he is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

(c) A and B being joint owners of a horse, A takes the horse out of B's possession, intending to use it. Here, as A has a right to use the horse, he does not fraudulently misappropriate it. But if A sells the horse and appropriates the whole proceeds to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

Explanation 1. A fraudulent misappropriation for a time only is a misappropriation within the meaning of this Clause.

Illustration.

A finds a Government paper belonging to Z, bearing a blank endorsement. A, knowing that the paper belongs to Z, pledges it with a banker as a security for a loan, intending at a future time to restore it to Z. A has committed an offence under this Clause.

Explanation 2. A person who finds property not in the possession of any other person and takes such property for the purpose of protecting it for, or of restoring it to, the owner, does not take or misappropriate it fraudulently, and is not guilty of an offence; but he is guilty of the offence above defined, if he appropriates it to his own use, when he knows or has the means of discovering the owner, or before he has used reasonable means to discover and give notice to the owner, and has kept the property a reasonable time to enable the owner to claim it.

What are reasonable means or what is a reasonable time in such a case is a question of fact.

It is not necessary that the finder should know who is the owner of the property, or that any particular person is the owner of it: it is sufficient if, at the time of appropriating it, he does not believe it to be his own property, or in good faith believes that the real owner cannot be found.

Illustrations.

(a) A finds a Rupee on the high road, not knowing to whom the Rupee belongs. A picks up the Rupee. Here A has not committed the offence defined in this Clause.

(b) A finds a letter on the road, containing a bank note. From the direction and contents of the letter he learns to whom the note belongs. He appropriates the note. He is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

(c) A finds a cheque payable to bearer. He can form no conjecture as to the person who has lost the cheque. But the name of the person, who has drawn the cheque, appears. A knows that this person can direct him to the person in whose favor the cheque was drawn. A appropriates the cheque without attempting to discover the owner. He is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

(d) A sees Z drop his purse with money in it. A picks up the purse with the intention of restoring it to Z, but afterwards appropriates it to his own use. A has committed an offence under this Clause.

(e) A finds a purse with money, not knowing to whom it belongs; he afterwards discovers that it belongs to Z, and appropriates it to his own use. A is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

(f) A finds a valuable ring, not knowing to whom it belongs. A sells it immediately without attempting to discover the owner. A is guilty of an offence under this Clause.

26. Whoever fraudulently misappropriates or converts to his own use property, knowing that such property was in the possession of a deceased person at the time of that person's decease, and has not since been in the possession of any person legally entitled to such possession, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Criminal breach of trust.

Illustrations.

(a) A, being executor to the will of a deceased person, fraudulently disobeys the law which directs him to divide the effects according to the will, and appropriates them to his own use. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(c) A, residing in Calcutta, is agent for Z, residing at Delhi. There is an express or implied contract between A and Z that all sums remitted by Z to A shall be invested by A according to Z's direction. Z remits a lac of Rupees to A, with directions to A to invest the same in Company's paper. A fraudulently disobeys the directions, and employs the money in his own business. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(d) But if A, in the last illustration, not fraudulently, but in good faith, believing that it will be more for Z's advantage to hold shares in the Bank of Bengal, disobeys Z's directions, and buys shares in the Bank of Bengal for Z, instead of buying Company's paper, here, though Z should suffer loss, and should be entitled to bring a Civil action against A on account of that loss, yet A, not having acted fraudulently, has not committed criminal breach of trust.

(e) A, a revenue officer, is entrusted with public money, and is either directed by law, or bound by a contract, express or implied, with the Government, to pay into a certain treasury all the public money which he holds. Illustrations.

(e) A draws a Bill of Exchange on himself in the name of B without B's authority, intending to discount it as a genuine Bill with a Banker and intending to take up the Bill on its maturity. Here, as A draws the Bill with intent to deceive the Banker by leading him to suppose that he had the security of B and thereby to discount the Bill, A is guilty of forgery.

A has committed forgery.

(i) Z dictates his will to A. A intentionally writes down a different legatee from the legatee named by Z, and by representing to Z that he has prepared the will according to his instructions, induces Z to sign the will. A has committed forgery.

A is guilty of forgery ; and if B draws the Bill upon the paper pursuant to A's intention, B is also guilty of forgery.

(c) A picks up a Bill of Exchange payable to the order of a different person of the same name. A endorses the Bill in his own name, intending to cause it to be believed that it was endorsed by the person to whose order it was payable : here A has committed forgery.

(d) A purchases an estate sold under execution of a decree against B. B after the seizure of the estate, in collusion with Z executes a lease of the estate to Z at a nominal rent and for a long period and dates the lease six months prior to the seizure with intent to defraud A and to cause it to be believed that the lease was granted before the seizure. B, though he executes the lease in his own name, commits forgery, by antedating it.

(e) A, a trader in anticipation of insolvency, lodges effects with B for A's benefit and with intent to defraud his creditors, and in order to give a colour to the transaction, writes a Promissory Note binding himself to pay to B a sum for value received, and antedates the note, intending that it may be believed to have been made before A was on the point of insolvency. Chapter XXI.

OF DEFAMATION.

1. Whoever by words either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs or by visible representations, makes or publishes any imputation concerning any person intending to harm or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation will harm the reputation of such person, is said, except in the cases excepted in the ten Clauses next following, to defame that person.

Defamation.

Explanation 1. A person may be guilty of defamation by means of an imputation upon a deceased person, if the imputation would harm the reputation of that person if living, and is hurtful to the feelings of his family or other near relatives.

Explanation 2. A person may be guilty of defamation by means of an imputation concerning a company or an association or collection of persons as such.

Explanation 3. An imputation in the form of an alternative or expressed ironically may amount to defamation.

Explanation 4. No imputation is said to harm a person's reputation unless that imputation directly or indirectly lowers the moral or intellectual character of that person, or lowers the character of that person in respect of his caste or of his calling, or lowers the credit of that person, or causes it to be believed that the body of that person is in a loathsome state or in a state generally considered as disgraceful.

Illustrations.

(a) A says—"Z is an honest man; he never stole B's watch;" intending to cause it to be believed that Z did steal B's watch. This is defamation, unless it fall within one of the exceptions.

(b) A is asked who stole B's watch. A points to Z, intending to cause it to be believed that Z stole B's watch. This is defamation, unless it fall within one of the exceptions.

Imputation of any truth which the public good requires to be made or published.

2. First Exception. It is not defamation to impute any thing which is true concerning any person if it be for the public good that the imputation should be made or published. Whether or not it is for the public good is a question of fact.

Public conduct of public servants.

3. Second Exception. It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the conduct of a public servant in the discharge of his public functions, or respecting his character so far as his character appears in that conduct, and no further.

4. Third Exception. It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the conduct of any person touching any public question, and respecting his character so far as his character appears in that conduct, and no further.

Illustration.

It is not defamation in A to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting Z's conduct in petitioning Government on a public question, in signing a requisition for a meeting on a public question, in presiding or attending at such a meeting, in forming or joining any society which invites the public support, in voting or canvassing for a particular candidate for any situation in the efficient discharge of the duties of which the public is interested.

Publication of reports of proceedings of Courts of Justice.

5. Fourth Exception. It is not defamation to publish a substantially true report of the proceedings of a Court of Justice or of the result of any such proceedings: but in any case in which the Court before which such proceedings is had shall by order have prohibited the publication of the proceedings, it may be defamation to publish such report before the prohibition has been withdrawn or the case has been finally disposed of by that Court, or in the case of proceedings preliminary to a trial in another Court, before the conclusion of the trial.

Explanation. A Justice of the Peace or other officer holding an enquiry in open Court preliminary to a trial in a Court of Justice is a Court within the meaning of the above Clause.

6. Fifth Exception. It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the merits of any case, Civil or Criminal, which has been decided by a Court of Justice, or respecting the conduct of any person as a party witness, or agent, in any such case, or respecting the character of such person, as far as his character appears in that conduct, and no further.

Illustrations.

(a) A says—"I think Z's evidence on that trial is so contradictory that he must be stupid or dishonest." A is within this exception if he says this in good faith; inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses respects Z's character as it appears in Z's conduct as a witness, and no further.

(b) But if A says—"I do not believe what Z asserted at that trial, because I know him to be a man without veracity;"—A is not within this exception, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z's character is an opinion not founded on Z's conduct as a witness.

Merits of a public performance.

7. Sixth Exception. It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion respecting the merits of any performance which its author has submitted to the judgment of the public, or respecting the character of the author so far as his character appears in such performance, and no further.

(d) A says of a book published by Z. "Z's book is foolish, Z must be a weak man. Z's book is indecent, Z must be a man of impure mind." A is within this exception, if he says this in good faith, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z respects Z's character only so far as it appears in Z's book, and no further.

(e) But if A says—"I am not surprised that Z's book is foolish, and indecent, for he is a weak man, and a libertine." A is not within this exception, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z's character is an opinion not founded on Z's book.

Censure passed in good faith by a person having lawful authority over another.

8. Seventh Exception. It is not defamation in a person having over another any authority, either conferred by law, or arising out of a lawful contract made with that other, to pass in good faith any censure on the conduct of that other in matters to which such lawful authority relates.

Illustration.

A Judge censuring in good faith the conduct of a witness, or of an officer of the Court; a head of a department censuring in good faith those who are under his orders; a parent censuring in good faith a child in the presence of other children; a schoolmaster, whose authority is derived from a parent, censuring in good faith a pupil in the presence of other pupils; a master censuring a servant in good faith for remissness in service; a banker censuring in good faith the cashier of his Bank for the conduct of such cashier as such cashier—are within this exception.

Accusation preferred in good faith to a duly authorized person.

9. Eighth Exception. It is not defamation to prefer in good faith an accusation against any person to any of those who have lawful authority over that person with respect to the subject matter of accusation.

Illustration.

If A in good faith accuses Z before a Magistrate; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a servant, to Z's master; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a child, to Z's father; A is within this exception.

10. Ninth Exception. It is not defamation in a person giving directions for the management of his concerns to make an imputation on the character of another, provided that the imputation be made in good faith for the protection of the interests of the person making it.

Illustration.

A, a shopkeeper, says to B, who manages his business, "Sell nothing to Z unless he pays you ready money, for I have no opinion of his honesty." A is within the exception, if he has made this imputation on Z in good faith, for the protection of his own interests.

Caution intended for the good of the person to whom it is conveyed.

11. Tenth Exception.—It is not defamation to convey a caution, in good faith, to one person against another, provided that such caution be intended for the good of the person to whom it is conveyed or of some person in whom that person is interested.

"Para. 85. We cannot acquiesce in your having ruled that it may be "discretional with the several Local Governments when good cause is shown for the indulgence, to sanction Leave of Absence, under Section XIV. of the new Rules." (the Section which authorizes the grant of six months' leave on special private affairs) "to such parties as may not have occasion to apply for the whole at once, in instalments not to exceed in the aggregate six months in six years." This interpretation would have the practical effect of making the grant of this description of leave almost as much a matter of course as the grant of the privilege-leave of one month in each year, whereas it is our intention, and Clause 3 of the Rule, Section XIV. expressly states, that it should be the duty of the Government to consider and determine, in each case, whether the grounds of the application are sufficiently urgent to justify the concession of the leave. The Rule will therefore remain in its original form.

BENGAL CIVIL FUND.

At a Half-yearly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Civil Fund, held at the Town Hall, on the 30th January 1857.

PRESENT: Messrs. C. Allen, J. G. Campbell, G. G. Mackintosh, G. D. Wilkins, Hon'ble E. Drummond, C. Beadon, St. G. Tucker, E. F. Harrison, G. Palmer, J. A. Crawford, and P. Wigram.

CHARLES ALLEN, ESQUIRE, in the Chair.

Read the following Report, submitted by the Managers :—

"The Managers submit their proceedings for the past half-year, for the consideration and sanction of the Meeting.

"Subject to the approval of the Subscribers at this Meeting, they have admitted to the benefits of the Fund the following Families :

Mrs. Pringle, yearly	£	300
Four Children	„	400
	£	700
Less under Rule 25	„	100
	£	600

"The Widow and four Children (three Daughters and one Son) of the late Mr. William A. Pringle, (an Annuitant of 1844,) who died in England on 12th December 1855, admitted under the old Rules. This is the only family whose pensions have become chargeable on the Accounts of the year 1855-56.

Mrs. Fagan, yearly	£	300
Three Children..	„	160
	£	460

"The Widow and three Children (two Daughters and a posthumous Son born on 27th June 1856) of the late Mr. C. W. Fagan, who died in England on 22nd May 1856, admitted under the new Rules.

Mrs. Robinson, yearly	£	300

"The Widow of the late Mr F. H Robinson, (an Annuitant of 1852,) who died in Turkey on the 14th October 1856, admitted under the new Rules provisionally, pending the receipt of necessary papers. Mrs. Robinson was an incumbent under the old Rules, as the Widow of Mr. A. Raikes, from 8th June 1849, and since her marriage to Mr. Robinson, in March 1854, has continued to receive the half of her former pension of £300.

Mrs. Dunbar	£	300
A -on	„	80
	£	380

"The Widow and Son of the late Mr. J. Dunbar, who died in Calcutta on the 1st November 1856, under the new Rules provisionally.

"The Accounts for the year 1855-56 are submitted. In accordance with a Resolution of the General Meeting of the 31st January 1855, the Managers have transferred to the Appropriated Fund a sum sufficient to make the Balance of that Fund equal to the total value of all existing pensions, including those granted under the old, as well as those under the new, Rules.

"The third column, which was introduced in the Accounts of 1851-52, for the exhibition of all payments on account of pensions granted previous to 1st January 1850, being no longer required, has been discontinued.

"In the month of June last, the Managers received a letter from Government, communicating the wishes of the Hon'ble Court of Directors, that the rates of Subscription to the Fund should be raised, with reference however to the very decided improvement in the position of the Fund which had taken place since the time to which the observations of the Hon'ble Court referred ; and feeling that they could find no argument founded on the requirements of the Fund, on which to base an appeal to the Service for increasing the rates of Contribution, the Managers felt themselves justified in submitting to Government, for eventual transmission to the Court of Directors, a Statement explanatory of the Fund's position and prospects ; and the Managers confidently hope that the Report which they were enabled to give of the affairs of the Fund was such as to remove all doubt as to the complete sufficiency of its income for every purpose.

"The Managers submit for the consideration of the Meeting, that an amendment be introduced in Article 17 of the Rules, by prefixing the following words to the Rule as it now stands :—"That the "presence of nine Members shall be necessary to form a Meeting, and that in the event of an insuffi- "cient attendance, the Secretary be empowered to fix an adjourned date for such Meeting by Adver- "tisement in the Calcutta Gazette and Calcutta papers, not being later than fifteen days after the "day originally appointed for the Meeting."

Resolved.—That the admission of the families above-named be confirmed.

The Accounts for the past year were approved.

No. 11.

Fort William, Financial Department,
The 6th February 1857.

Notification.—Read an endorsement from the Home Department, No. 122, dated the 23rd ultimo, forwarding for consideration and orders a letter, No. 14, dated the 7th idem, from the Chief Secretary to the Government of Fort St. George, having reference to the absence of Uncovenanted Servants drawing salaries of less than 100 Rs. a month.

RESOLUTION.—On the 25th July last, it was resolved by this Government, with a view to ensure a correct calculation of the periods of Service entitling Uncovenanted Servants to pension, that the Heads of Public Offices and Departments under the control of the several Governments should furnish, on the 1st May of each year, to the Civil Auditors and the Military Auditors General of the several Presidencies, an Annual Return showing the Leave of Absence granted during the year, (preceding), under the New Uncovenanted Civil Service Absentee Rules, to those Uncovenanted Servants whose leave might not have been notified in the Gazette.

Referring to this Resolution, the Government of Madras observes that, as the New Rules are restricted in their operation to Uncovenanted Servants in the receipt of salaries of Rupees 100 a month and upwards, the above orders would not appear to apply to Uncovenanted Servants whose salaries are below that amount, and that if such be the intention of this Government, there is nothing to prevent the entire periods of absence of Uncovenanted Servants of the latter class counting as service towards pension. Definite orders, however, are solicited on this point and also on a question raised by the Civil Auditor at Madras "whether it is not left optional with the Heads of Offices to grant leave of absence to persons whose salary is less than 100 Rupees a month, for a limited period, either on Sick certificate or private affairs, making such stoppages as they may think proper, the stoppages thus made being paid to the individuals performing the duties of the absentee and no extra expense being incurred to the State"

On this solicitation of the Government of Madras, the Right Hon'ble the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that, in granting leave of absence either on Medical certificate or on private affairs to Uncovenanted Servants whose salaries are less than 100 Rupees per month, the Heads of Offices shall be guided by the spirit of the Rules prescribed for those servants who are in the receipt of salaries of Rupees 100 a month and upwards; that all cases in which leave is so granted to Uncovenanted Servants whose salaries are less than 100 Rupees per month, shall be reported to the Civil Auditor and the Military Auditor General respectively in the manner prescribed in the Orders of the 25th July last; and that all past leave enjoyed by any such Uncovenanted Servant shall be counted as service under the orders of the Honorable the Court of Directors noted in the margin, although such leave may have exceeded the period allowed under the new Uncovenanted Civil Service Absentee Rules.

Para 44 of Court's Despatch No 38 of 1856, dated 13th May, published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 16th July last, page 1136.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a Copy of the foregoing Resolution be sent to the Home Department for communication to the Government of Fort Saint George.

Geological Museum,

IN CONNEXION WITH THE

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY OF INDIA,

HASTINGS' STREET, CALCUTTA.

THE Government of India having recently sanctioned a considerable extension of the "Museum of Economic Geology for India," which had for some years existed under the careful Superintendence of Mr. Piddington in connexion with the Asiatic Society of Bengal, the attention of all who may be interested in the study of Geology, and of all who may desire the internal improvement of this country, is solicited to the objects o this Institution; and their aid in the promotion of these objects is requested.

In the year 1840, a Museum of Economic Geology for India was established, under the sanction of the Honorable the Court of Directors. Its objects and aim were clearly set forth in a brief statement drawn up by Mr. Piddington, and freely circulated at the time. In conjunction with the Asiatic Society of Bengal, and in their Rooms, it grew into some importance, and gradually became the depository of many good and valuable specimens, illustrative of the mineral wealth of this country. But simultaneously with its growth, the Science of Geology itself was rapidly attaining its present development. All cognate Sciences were spreading their domain, and the results of investigations in each were becoming more widely and more largely known. Since then, also the study of Mineralogy, of Geology, and of Chemistry, has been introduced as a part of the established course of Education, and the practical applications of these Sciences to Mining and to Engineering generally will soon be as regularly taught in this country as they have been for years past in Europe.

The extension of the Museum had become, therefore, essential, if it were to keep pace with the progress of knowledge, and to retain any of its value as a means and aid to instruction. With this view, the Right Hon'ble the Governor General in Council has given orders for the formation, on a much more extended scale than hitherto, of a general Geological Collection, with a special view to illustrate the geological structure, the mineral wealth, and the manufacturing resources of this Empire. A commodious house has been rented for the purpose at present, and it is intended that abundant accommodation shall be provided for the Museum in the new building for the University in Calcutta, when the Geological Collection will form a portion of the general Collections of Natural History to be connected with that establishment.

In the Museum now in progress of formation every thing tending to illustrate the Geology of this country, in its widest sense, will find a place. The history of the Science, the progress of its investigations, the nature of its classifications, the phenomena with which it is concerned, the laws of those phenomena, will all be illustrated. The grand series of organisms, the remains of which occur in such abundance in various deposits, will be exhibited, and the whole Natural History of rocks traced out, so far as collections enable this to be done. By the aid of Drawings, such objects as cannot be procured will be made familiar to the Student, and by the use of Maps, the structure of countries, which it would be impossible for many to visit, will be made known

While thus endeavouring to render the Student acquainted with the principles of the Science, the practical applications of these principles will, at the same time, be fully exhibited. Mining processes, mining products, and the principal metallurgical operations, will also be included, and the comparative excellence of each, so far as possible, made known. The building materials of the Country, and their applications, the localities where used, the durability, the facility of working, the strength, &c., of the stones, will all be examined into. The importance of Mineral Waters must not be overlooked, and the value of these will be determined by careful investigations.

Further, in a country so essentially agricultural as India, the character of the soils and sub-soils, their peculiar adaptation to peculiar crops, their composition, and, in dependence upon this, the easiest means of renewing or increasing their fertility; all these are important questions which at once connect themselves with the researches of the Geologist, inasmuch as the natural powers of any soil depend essentially on the source from which that soil has been derived, and therefore on the geological structure of the district.

To enable such enquiries to be effectively carried out, a small Laboratory is attached to the Museum, where such analyses and investigations as may be requisite will be carried on; and it is hoped that most valuable, because accurate and detailed, information may thus be acquired.

Moreover, careful summaries of all existing knowledge on the geological structure of the Country, will be compiled and arranged, so as to facilitate reference. Much has been done in investigating the geological structure of this Country, and very valuable papers have been given to the public, descriptive of various parts of India. But these facts are scattered through various periodicals, are often only incidentally noticed in travels, or can be found only in manuscript among the Records of Public Offices. Many of these are with difficulty intelligible, from the writers frequently calling similar objects by different names, or vice versâ. It is, therefore, necessary to obtain the key to the terms used before these can be compared. It will be an object with the Officers of the Geological Survey to remove this difficulty, and to bring into an accessible form every thing which has been published bearing on the geological structure, the mineral wealth, or the manufacturing industry (so far as this is concerned with mineral products) of this Empire.

The Museum of Geology has been placed in connexion with, and under the same superintendence as, the Geological Survey of India. By this means opportunities will be afforded of procuring a very perfect series of the rocks, fossils, and minerals of the districts visited by that Survey. But the aid of all is solicited in completing such local collections as may illustrate the structure of the several districts. Every one will be able to contribute something of value. Those permanently resident in any locality have infinitely greater advantages and facilities for procuring good illustrations of its mineral structure and products than any visitor could enjoy, and from such we confidently look for much that will prove of great interest and of great value. Every thing which can, in any way, tend to illustrate the rocks, the fossils, the minerals, or the practical applications of these will prove interesting.

Regarding the nature and properties of all specimens forwarded, the fullest information will be freely afforded, on application to the Curator of the Museum. Organic remains will be examined, and, so far as possible, carefully named for contributors, and every facility given for the investigation of any particular subject or any particular line of research connected with Geology.

The formation of a Library of reference, in connection with the Museum, has been sanctioned, and has already made considerable progress. Under proper restrictions, this will be accessible to all Students of Geology, and others interested in such enquiries.

Catalogues of the several departments of the Museum will be issued from time to time. Public Officers, and other persons in all parts of India, are requested to send contributions. All specimens, carefully packed, may be forwarded by the safest and most economical mode of conveyance, addressed to

THE MUSEUM OF GEOLOGY,
No. 1, HASTINGS' STREET,
Calcutta.

And it is requested that a communication stating fully the wishes of the donors may, at the same time, be forwarded by post to

13. The Principal Sudder Ameen shall be empowered to receive, try, and determine suits of every description cognizable by the Civil Courts in which the amount claimed or the computed value of the property may exceed the sum of two thousand five hundred Rupees, provided the landed or other real property to which the suit may relate shall be situated, or provided in all other cases the cause of action shall have arisen, or the defendant, at the time when the suit may be commenced, shall dwell, or carry on business, or work for gain, within the limits of the district over which his jurisdiction may extend.

20 The judicial decisions of the Courts of Justice shall be subject to revision only by the constituted Courts of appellate jurisdiction, or by themselves, under the rules of the code of procedure applicable to revi ws of judgment.

71. The bankruptcy or insolvency of the plaintiff in any suit which the assignees might maintain for the benefit of the creditors shall not be a valid objection to the continuance of such suit, unless the assignees shall decline to continue the suit, and give security for the costs thereof, within such reasonable time as the Judge may order; but the proceedings may be stayed until such election is made; and in case the assignees neglect or refuse to continue the suit, and to give such security, within the time limited by the order, the defendant may, within eight days after such neglect or refusal, object bankruptcy or insolvency as a reason for abating the suit.

Of Notices to produce, and how they are to be served.

72. Whenever any of the parties to a suit is desirous that any document, writing, or other thing, which he supposes to be in the possession or power of another of the parties thereto, should be produced at any hearing of the cause, he shall at the earliest opportunity deliver to the clerk or proper officer of the Court two notices in writing to the party in whose possession or power he supposes the document, writing, or other thing, to be, calling upon him to produce the document, writing, or other thing, on the day on which he wishes the same to be produced; and one of such notices shall be retained by the officer, and the other shall be delivered by him to the bailiff or proper officer, to be served in the manner hereinafter mentioned:

Two notices in writing to be delivered to the proper officer of the Court.

(1.) If the party on whom the notice is to be served shall have employed a vakeel to act for him in the cause, the notice shall be served on such vakeel by delivering the notice to him personally, or by leaving it at his office, or ordinary place of residence.

How the notice is to be served.

(2.) If the party shall not have employed a vakeel to act for him in the cause, and shall have his place of abode within eight miles from the Court-house by the nearest road, the notice shall be served on him by delivering it to him personally, or leaving it at his place of abode.

(3.) If the party shall not have employed a vakeel to act for him in the cause, and shall not have his place of abode within eight miles from the Court-house by the nearest road, but shall have entered in the book, to be kept for that purpose by the proper officer, the name and place of abode of some person residing within such distance of the Court-house on whom he may wish that all notices or process in the cause should be served on his behalf, the notices shall be served by delivering the same to such person, or by leaving it at his place of abode.

(4.) If the party shall not have employed a vakeel to act for him in the cause, and shall neither have his own place of abode within eight miles from the Court-house by the nearest road, nor shall have entered in the book to be kept for that purpose the name and place of abode of some person residing within such distance of the Court-house on whom he may wish that all notices or process in the cause should be served on his behalf, the notice shall in like manner be served by delivering the same to the party in person or by leaving it at his place of abode; unless the notice be for some day subsequent to the first hearing of the cause, in which case it shall be sufficient service of the notice if it be fixed up in some conspicuous place in the office of the clerk or proper officer of the Court, and also in some conspicuous place of the Court-house.

Of the Appearance of the Parties, and Judgment by Default for Non-appearance.

73. On the day in that behalf mentioned in the summons, and from day to day, if necessary, until the cause is called on, the parties shall be in attendance at the Court-house in person or by a vakeel of the Court duly empowered to represent them in all matters relating to the prosecution or defence of the action, as the case may be.

Parties must appear in person or by vakeel.

74. If, on the day fixed for the hearing of the cause, or any other day subsequent thereto, on which the cause may be called on, neither party appears, either in person or by a vakeel of the Court, when duly called upon by the proper officer of the Court, the cause shall be struck out, with liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit, unless precluded by the rules for the limitation of actions. If the plaintiff shall appear in person or by a vakeel, and the defendant shall not appear in person or by a vakeel, and it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Judge that the summons was duly served, or if the defendant having appeared in person or by a vakeel shall refuse to answer to the claim of the plaintiff, then and in any of these cases the Judge shall pass judgment against him by default. And in like manner, if the defendant shall appear in person or by a vakeel, and the plaintiff shall not appear in person or by a vakeel, or having appeared shall refuse to state his claim or to answer any questions respecting the same that the Judge may think proper to put to him, then and in any of these cases the Judge shall pass judgment against the plaintiff by default.

Consequences of non-appearance of a sole plaintiff or defendant.

75. When there are two or more plaintiffs, any one or more of them may be authorized to appear, plead, and act for the other or others of them; and in like manner, when there are two or more defendants, any one or more of them may be authorized to appear, plead, and act for the other or others of them; provided that the authority shall in all cases be in writing, and shall be filed with the proper officer of the Court; when so filed, it shall be as effectual to all intents and purposes as if the person so authorized to appear, plead, and act, were a vakeel of the Court.

When there are several plaintiffs or defendants, each may authorize the other to appear for him.

76. Nothing in the preceding Article contained shall be taken to prevent any one of two or more plaintiffs or defendants from appearing for the other or others of them respectively, without any special authority, when already entitled by law so to do by reason of unity of interest in the matter in dispute, or otherwise howsoever.

When such appearance may be made without special authority.

77. If these are two or more plaintiffs, and one or more of them shall appear in person, or by vakeel, or by a co-plaintiff or co-plaintiffs duly authorized or entitled as aforesaid, and the other or others of them shall not appear in person, or by vakeel, or by a co-plaintiff or co-plaintiffs duly authorized or entitled as aforesaid, it shall be competent to the Judge to proceed with the suit at the instance of the other plaintiff or plaintiffs who shall have appeared, in the same way as if all the plaintiffs had appeared, and to pass such order as may be just and proper in the circumstances of the case; and if there are two or more defendants, and one or more of them shall appear in person, or by vakeel, or by a co-defendant or co-defendants duly authorized or entitled as aforesaid, and the other or others of them shall not appear in person, or by vakeel, or by a co-defendant or co-defendants duly authorized or entitled as aforesaid, and if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall consent to abandon the suit against the defendant or defendants who shall have appeared, and if judgment by default can be given against the defendant or defendants who shall not have appeared, without detriment to the rights or interests of the other defendant or defendants, judgment may be given by default against the defendant or defendants who shall have so failed to appear, upon such terms as to the costs of the other defendant or defendants, or otherwise, as to the Judge may seem proper; but if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall not agree to abandon the suit against the defendant or defendants who shall have appeared, or if judgment cannot be given by default against the defendant or defendants who shall not have appeared, without detriment to the rights or interests of the defendant or defendants who shall have appeared, the Judge shall proceed with the cause to judgment, and shall at the time of passing his judgment give such order with respect to the defendant or defendants who shall not have appeared as shall be just and proper in the circumstances of the case.

78. In all cases of judgment against a defendant by default, for non-appearance, he may apply, at any time before the same shall have been finally executed, to the Court by which the judgment was passed, for an order to set it aside; and if it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Judge that the summons was not duly served, or that the defendant was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the cause was called on for hearing, the Judge shall pass an order to set aside the judgment and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the cause. And in like manner, in all cases of judgment against a plaintiff by default for non-appearance, he may apply, within a reasonable time, for an order to set aside the judgment; and if it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Judge that the plaintiff was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the cause was called on for hearing, the Judge shall pass an order to set aside the judgment by default, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the cause. In all cases whatsoever of judgment by default, in which a Judge shall pass an order for setting aside the judgment, his order shall be final; but in all cases in which he shall reject an application to set aside a judgment by default, an appeal shall lie from his order refusing the application, to the tribunal to which his final decision in the suit would be appealable, provided that the appeal be preferred within the time allowed for an appeal from such final decision.

When and how judgment by default may be set aside.

79. If it shall not be proved to the satisfaction of the Judge that the summons was duly served on the defendant in sufficient time to enable him to appear in person or by vakeel on the day fixed for the hearing of the cause, the Judge shall, at the option of the plaintiff, either postpone the cause to a future day, and grant him a second summons to the defendant, to be served in like manner as aforesaid, in continuation of the existing suit, or permit him to withdraw his suit, and if he shall elect to withdraw his suit, he shall be at liberty to institute a fresh suit for the same matter against the defendant in the same Court, or in any other Court of competent jurisdiction, at any time, unless precluded by the rules for the limitation of actions.

When the defendant has not been summoned in sufficient time, the plaintiff may apply for a new summons or bring fresh suit.

Of the Examination of the Parties.

80. In all suits in which both the parties appear in person or by a vakeel before the Judge, they or their vakeels may be examined orally by the Judge, and it shall be incumbent on them respectively to answer such questions in regard to the suit as he may think proper to put to them.

Examination of the parties or their vakeels.

81. If any of the parties shall appear by a vakeel of the Court, and such vakeel shall refuse, or be unable to answer any material question relating to the case, which the Judge is of opinion that the party whom he represents ought to answer, and is likely to be able to answer if interrogated in person, the Judge shall postpone the hearing of the cause to a future day, and direct that the party whose vakeel may have refused, or been unable to answer as aforesaid, shall attend in person on such day, and shall pay the costs of the opposite party; and if the party so directed to attend shall fail to appear in person on the day to be so appointed, the Judge may pass judgment against him, as in case of default, or give such other order in relation to the cause as he may deem proper in the circumstances of the case.

Consequence of refusal or inability of vakeel to answer.

Of the Production of Documents.

82. The parties, or their vakeels, shall bring with them, and have in readiness at the first hearing of the cause, to be produced when called upon by the Court, all their documentary evidence of every description, and all documents, writings, or other things which may have been specified in any notice to produce which may have been served on them respectively within a reasonable time before the hearing of the cause; and no documentary evidence of any kind, which the parties or any of them may desire to produce, shall be received by the Court at any subsequent stage of the proceedings, unless good cause be shown to its satisfaction for the non-production of the document at the first hearing.

If the exhibit be a deed, instrument, or writing, chargeable with stamp duty under the existing Regulations of the Bengal Code, or Acts of the Council of India, it shall not be received in evidence if unstamped, or not sufficiently stamped, until the whole or the deficiency (as the case may be) of the stamp duty and the penalty required by the existing Regulations of the Bengal Code or Acts of the Council of India shall have been paid to the clerk or proper officer of the Court.

Unstamped documents may be received on payment of duty and penalty.

85. Such officer shall, upon payment to him of the whole, or of the deficiency (as the case may be) of the stamp duty payable upon or in respect of such document, and of the penalty required by the Regulations of the Bengal Code or Acts of the Council of India, give a receipt for the amount of the duty or deficiency which the Judge shall determine to be payable, and also of the penalty; and thereupon such document shall be admissible in evidence, saving all just exceptions on other grounds; and an entry of the fact of such payment and of the amount thereof shall be made in a book kept by such officer; and such officer shall at the end of every month duly make a return to the collector of revenue of the Zillah of the monies (if any) which he has so received by way of duty or penalty, distinguishing between such monies, and stating the number and title of the cause and the names of the parties from whom he received such monies, and the date, if any, and description of the document, for the purpose of identifying the same; and he shall pay over the said monies to the collector of revenue, or to such person as he may appoint or authorize to receive the same; and the collector of revenue, or other proper authority, shall, upon production of the receipt hereinbefore mentioned, cause such documents to be stamped with the proper stamp or stamps in respect of the sums so paid as aforesaid.

Duty and penalty to be received by officer of Court.

86. When an exhibit is received by the Court, and admitted in evidence, it shall be endorsed with the number and title of the suit, the name of the party producing it, and the date on which it was produced, and shall be filed as part of the record.

How admitted exhibits are to be marked.

87. When an exhibit is rejected by the Court, it shall be endorsed in the manner specified in the last preceding Article, with the addition of the word "rejected," and the endorsement shall be subscribed by the Judge. The exhibit shall then be returned to the party who produced it, unless the Court shall think proper, for special reasons, to reclaim it; and in all cases in which a rejected exhibit is returned, a certified copy of the exhibit and the endorsement shall be kept by the Court.

Rejected exhibits to be marked and returned.

88. When the time for appealing has elapsed, or in case the suit has been appealed, then after the appeal has been finally disposed of, either party shall be entitled, on application to the Court in which the exhibit may be, to receive back any document produced by him in the suit unless the further use of such exhibit has been superseded by the terms of the decree, or the Court has directed it to be detained for purposes of public justice, as on suspicion of forgery.

When exhibit admitted in evidence may be returned.

89. Any exhibit may be returned before the time mentioned in the last preceding Article, if the Judge of the Court in which the document may happen to be shall think proper, for special reasons, to order its return.

90. In all cases in which a document once received by a Court of Justice and admitted in evidence is restored, a copy, properly certified, shall be substituted for it in the record of the suit, and a receipt shall be given by the party receiving it in a separate receipt book kept for the purpose.

Certified copy of returned exhibits to be kept.

91. Any Civil Court may, of its own accord, or upon the application of any of the parties to a suit, send for, either from its own records, or from any other public office or Court, the record of any other suit or case, and inspect the same, when the inspection of such record or any part of it shall appear likely to elucidate the facts of the suit before the Court, and to promote the ends of justice.

Court may send for papers from its own records or from other public offices or Courts.

Of the Settlement of Issues.

92. If in the course of the oral examination of the parties or their vakeels, if shall appear that they are not at issue upon any question of law or fact, the Court may at once give judgment; and if it shall appear that they are at issue on some question of law or fact, the Judge, after he shall have satisfied himself by such oral examination of the parties or their vakeels, on what questions of law or fact they are really at issue, will proceed to frame and record the issues of law and fact on which the right decision of the case may appear to him to depend.

Framing of Issues.

93. For the purpose of assisting the Judge in framing the issues, the parties or their vakeels may tender at the first hearing of the cause written statements of their respective cases, which statements the Judge shall receive and peruse, and put on the record; but he may, nevertheless, frame the issues from the allegations of fact which he collects from the oral examinations, notwithstanding any difference between such allegations of fact, and the allegations of fact contained in the written statements so tendered by the parties or their vakeels.

Written statements may be tendered by the parties to assist the Judge at the first hearing of the cause.

94. No such written statement shall be received after the first hearing of the cause, unless called for by the Judge under the power hereinafter contained.

No statement to be taken hereafter unless called for by the Judge.

95. It shall be competent to the Judge, at any time before final judgment, to call for a written statement, or an additional written statement, from any of the parties, for the purpose of assisting him to frame or amend the issues.

Judge may at any time call for a written statement.

96. Written statements shall be as brief as the nature of the case will admit, and shall not be argumentative, nor by way of answer one to the other; but each statement shall be confined, as much as possible, to a simple narrative of the facts which the party by whom or on whose behalf the written statement is made believes to be material to the case, and which he believes he will be able to prove if called upon by the Court.

Judge may reject an improper statement,

97. If it shall appear to the Court, that any written statement presented by or on behalf of a party, whether the same have been spontaneously tendered or have been called for by the Court, is argumentative or unnecessarily prolix, or that it contains matter irrelevant to the suit, the Judge may reject the same; and it shall not be competent to a party whose written statement has been rejected for any of these causes, to present another written statement, unless it shall be expressly called for by the Court. If the Judge think proper, he may, instead of absolutely rejecting the written statement, receive and record the same, after he shall have struck out all such parts of the written statement as he may consider to be argumentative, unnecessary, or irrelevant; and such parts of any written statement as may be so struck out by the Judge shall not be allowed in the costs ordered to be paid by the opposite party, if costs be decreed against him. It shall also be competent to the Judge to impose upon the party from whose written statement he shall see fit to strike out any part, as being argumentative, unnecessary, or irrelevant, a fine not exceeding fifty Rupees.

or expunge irrelevant matter,

Judge may call for a person whom he thinks it proper to examine before framing the issues.

98. If the Judge shall be of opinion that the issues cannot be correctly framed without the examination of some person other than the persons already before the Court, or without the reading of some document not produced by any of such persons, he may adjourn the framing of the issues to a future day, and may compel the attendance of such person, or the production of the document by the person in whose hands it may be, by subpœna or other suitable process.

Amendment of issues.

99. At any time before the decision of the case, the Judge may amend the issues on such terms as to him shall seem fit, and all such amendments as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real question or controversy between the parties shall be so made Appeal.

100. If either party is dissatisfied with the issues as finally framed by the Court, such party may appeal upon that ground after the decision of the case.

Of Issues by Agreement of Parties.

Questions of fact, or of law or equity, may be stated by the parties in the form of an issue, and an agreement may be entered into for the payment of a sum of money, or the doing or the refraining to do a particular act, according to the result of the issue.

101. When the parties to a suit are agreed as to the question or questions of fact, or of law or equity, to be decided between them, they may, at any time after the issue of the summons, state the same in the form of an issue, and enter into an agreement in writing, which shall not be subject to any stamp duty, that upon the finding of the Judge in the affirmative or the negative of such issue a sum of money fixed by the parties, or to be ascertained by the Judge upon a question inserted in the issue for that purpose, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them, or that some property specified in the agreement, and in dispute in the suit, shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them, or that one or more of the parties shall do or perform some particular legal act or acts, or shall refrain from doing or performing some particular act or acts, specified in the agreement, and having reference to the matter in dispute, either with or without the costs of the suit.

The Judge, if satisfied that the agreement was executed bonâ fide, may decree accordingly.

102. If the Judge shall be satisfied, after an examination of the parties, or their vakeels, or taking such evidence as he may deem proper, that the agreement was duly executed by the parties, and that the parties have a bonâ fide interest in the decision of such question or questions, and that the same is or are fit to be tried or decided, he may proceed to record and try the same, and deliver his finding or opinion thereon in the same manner as if the issue had been framed by himself in an ordinary suit, and may upon his finding or deciding in such issue, give judgment for the sum so fixed by the parties or so ascertained as aforesaid, or otherwise according to the terms of the agreement; and upon the judgment which shall be so given, decree shall follow and may be executed in the same way as if the judgment had been pronounced in a contested suit.

When the Suit may be disposed of at the First Hearing.

If the summons was for a final disposal of the case, or the parties consent, suit may be decided at first hearing.

103. If the Court shall be satisfied that the questions of law or fact in which the parties are at issue do not require any further argument or proof than such as the parties or their vakeels can at once supply, the Court may at once decide such question, if the summons have been issued for a final disposal of the cause; and if the summons have been issued for a settlement of issues only, the Court may in like manner at once decide the question, if the parties consent thereto.

104. When the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, if the parties or either of them do not consent that the Court shall at once decide the questions of law or fact on which they may be at issue, or if the questions of law or fact on which they are at issue require further argument or proof than the parties or their vakeels can at once supply, the Judge shall postpone the further hearing of the cause, and shall fix a day for the production of further evidence, or for further argument, as the case may require.

Of Adjournments.

Judge may grant time, or adjourn to a future day.

105. The Judge may, at any stage of the suit, grant time to the parties, or either of them, and may from time to time adjourn the hearing of the cause as he may think fit; and in all such cases the party applying for time shall pay the costs occasioned by such adjournment, unless the Judge shall otherwise direct.

106. If on any day to which the hearing of the cause may be adjourned, the parties or either of them shall not appear in person or by vakeel, the Court may proceed to dispose of the cause in the manner specified in Article 74 or Article 77 of this Chapter, as the case may be, or may make such other order as may appear to be just and proper in the circumstances of the case.

How the Judge is to proceed if the parties fail to appear on the day fixed.

Of Summoning Witnesses.

107. The parties or their vakeels may at any time obtain, on application to the clerk or other proper officer of Court, summonses to witnesses or other persons, with or without a clause requiring the production of books, deeds, papers, and writings in their possession or control, and in such summons any number of names may be inserted.

Application for Summons.

108. The person applying for a summons shall pay to the clerk or proper officer of the Court such a sum of money as shall appear to the Court to be reasonable, to defray the travelling and other expenses of each witness, or other person mentioned in the summons, in passing to and from the Court in which he may be required to attend, and for one day's attendance. If the Court be a subordinate Court, regard shall be had in fixing the scale of such expenses, to the rules, if any, established by the Court to which such Court shall be immediately subordinate. The sum so paid to the officer shall be tendered to the witness or other person, at the time of serving the summons, if it can be served personally. In addition to the sum so paid, the Court may direct such further sum to the paid to the witness or other person as may appear to be necessary to defray his travelling and other expenses, and also the expenses of his detention under the summons, and in case of default in payment, may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the goods of the person ordered to pay the same, and the witness or other person summoned shall not be bound to give evidence, or produce any document until such sum shall be paid.

Expenses of witnesses to be paid before issue of summons.

109. Every summons for the attendance of any witness or other person, shall specify the time and place at which he is required to attend, and also the purpose for which his attendance is required and any particular document or documents which the witness or other person may be called on to produce shall be described in the summons with convenient certainty. The witness shall further be required to produce all deeds and documents in his possession relating to the subject of the suit, and shall be bound to produce them unless he shall satisfy the Judge that the notice to produce did not give him sufficient information.

Time and place of attendance to be specified in summons.

110. Any person, whether a party to a suit or not, may be summoned to produce a document, without being summoned to give evidence, and any person summoned merely to produce a document, shall be deemed to have complied with the summons, if he cause such document to be produced, instead of attending personally to produce the same.

Summons to produce a document.

Service of Summons on a Witness.

111. Every summons shall be served by exhibiting the original, and delivering or tendering a copy; and the service shall in all cases be made a sufficient time before the time specified in the summons for the attendance of the witness, to allow him a reasonable time for preparation, and for travelling to the place at which his attendance is required.

How the summons shall be served.

112. Whenever it may be practicable, the service of the summons shall in all cases be upon the person thereby required to attend; but when he cannot be found, the service may be made on any adult member of his family residing with him.

Service to be on the witness, or a member of his family.

113. When the person required to attend cannot be found, and there is no adult member of his family on whom the summons can be served, the serving officer shall return the summons to the Court from whence it issued, with an endorsement thereon that he has been unable to serve it.

When the summons cannot be served it is to be returned to the Court.

114. The serving officer shall, in all cases in which the summons has been served, endorse on the original summons the time and the manner where and how it was served.

Time and manner of service to be endorsed on the summons.

115. If the person required to attend be resident within the jurisdiction of any other Court than that in which the suit is pending, whether such Court be within the said Presidency or not, summons shall be transmitted by the clerk or proper officer of the Court in which the suit is pending, to the clerk or proper officer of the Court within whose jurisdiction the person required to attend may reside; and the clerk or proper officer of the last-mentioned Court shall, upon receipt thereof, deliver the same to the bailiff or other proper officer of his own Court, to be served in the manner above directed; and upon the return of the summons by the serving officer, it shall be transmitted to the clerk or proper officer of the Court from whence it originally issued.

How a summons on a witness who resides in another jurisdiction is to be served.

116. If any person for whose attendance either to give evidence or to produce a document, a summons shall be issued, cannot be served in either of the ways herein-before specified, the Court on being certified thereof by the return of the serving officer, and upon proof that the evidence of such witness or the production of the document is material, and that the witness absconds or keeps out of the way, may cause a proclamation requiring the attendance of such person to give evidence, or produce the document, at a time and place to be named therein, to be affixed in some conspicuous plan upon or near to his house or place of abode; and if such person shall not attend at the time and place to be named in such proclamation, his property (real and personal), to such amount as the Court shall deem reasonable, (but subject to the same limitation as to the articles exempt from attachment, as in case of attachment for arrears of rent), shall be liable, under an order of the Court, to attachment and sale.

When a witness absconds his property may be attached.

117. The cost of the attachment shall be borne in the first instance by the party applying for it, and the Court issuing the summons and attachment shall not proceed to sale of the property if the witness shall appear and satisfy the Court that he did not abscond or keep out of the way to avoid service of a summons, and that he had not notice of the proclamation in time to attend at the time and place named therein. Upon the appearance of such witness the Court shall make such order in regard to the costs of the attachment as it shall deem fit. If the witness appearing shall fail to satisfy the Court that he did not abscond or keep out of the way to avoid service of a summons, and that he had not such a notice of the proclamation as aforesaid, it shall be in the discretion of the Court to order the property attached, or any part thereof, to be forfeited and sold for the purpose of satisfying all costs incurred in consequence of such default, or absconding or keeping out of the way, and any fine which the Court may deem fit to impose upon the witness under the provisions of Article 2 Chapter VI, or the Court may order the property to be released from the attachment upon payment of such costs and fine as aforesaid.

How the Court is to proceed with the witness on his appearance.

Of the Examination of Parties as Witnesses.

118. When a party to a suit appears in person at any hearing of the cause, he may be examined as a witness either in his own behalf or on behalf of any other party to the suit, in the same way as if he were not a party thereto.

Parties may be examined.

119. If any party to the suit shall require to enforce the attendance of any other party thereto as a witness, he shall, by himself or his vakeel, make a special application to the Court for an order that the party do attend, and shall show, to the satisfaction of the Court, sufficient grounds in support of such application, otherwise a summons shall not be issued.

Special application to be made for the examination of a party as a witness.

120. The Court if it think fit so to do, may, before making such order, cause notice to be given to the party or his vakeel, fixing a day for such party to show cause why he should not attend and give evidence ; and may also, from time to time, if necessary, for good and sufficient cause, enlarge the time for such application.

The Court may first issue a notice to show cause.

121. In support of the cause shown, the Court shall receive any declaration in writing of the party, if signed by him and delivered into the Court by himself or his vakeel.

May receive a written declaration in support of the cause shown.

122. If no sufficient cause be shown on the day fixed, or upon any subsequent day to which the Court shall enlarge the time for that purpose, the Court shall issue its order requiring the party to attend and give evidence.

If no sufficient cause be shown, summons to issue.

Attendance of Witnesses and Consequence of Non-attendance.

123. Any person who shall be summoned to appear and give evidence in a cause shall be bound to attend at the time and place named for that purpose.

Persons summoned to give evidence must attend.

124. If any witness, on whom any summons to give evidence or produce a document shall have been served in either of the ways specified in Article 112 of this Chapter, shall, without lawful excuse, fail to comply with such summons, the Court may issue an order to the bailiff or other proper officer to apprehend and bring the witness before the Court. If any such person abscond or keep out of the way, so that he cannot be seized or brought before the Court, his property shall be liable to attachment and sale in the same manner as is provided in Article 116 of this Chapter, with respect to a witness on whom the service of a summons cannot be effected.

Consequences of non-attendance by a witness not a party to the suit.

125. If any witness, attending or being present in Court, shall, without lawful excuse, refuse to give evidence, or to subscribe his deposition as hereinafter required, or to produce any document in his custody or possession named in such summons as aforesaid, upon being required by the Court so to do, the Court may commit such witness to close custody for such reasonable time as it may deem proper, unless he shall, in the meantime, consent to give his evidence, or to sign his deposition, or to produce the document; after which, in the event of his persisting in his refusal, the Court may proceed to deal with him according to the provisions of Article 2 Chapter VI.

Consequences of refusal to give evidence.

126. If any person, being a party to the suit, who shall be ordered to attend to give evidence or produce a document shall, without lawful excuse, fail to comply with such order, or attending, or being present in Court, shall, without lawful excuse, refuse to give evidence, or to subscribe his deposition, or to produce any document in his custody or possession, named in such summons as aforesaid, upon being required by the Court so to do, the Court may either pass judgment against the party so failing or refusing, as in case of default, or give such other order in relation to the cause as the Court may deem proper in the circumstances of the case.

Consequence of non-attendance or refusal of a party.

127. Any person present in Court, whether a party or not, may be called upon by the Court to give evidence and to produce any document then and there in his actual possession or in his power, in the same manner and subject to the same rules as if he had been summoned to attend and give evidence, or to produce such document, and shall be liable to be dealt with by the Court as a party or witness, as the case may be, would, under any of the preceding provisions, be dealt with for any refusal to obey the order of the Court.

to a higher tribunal, the evidence of each witness given upon such examination shall be taken down in writing, by or in the presence and under the superintendence of the Judge, not ordinarily in the form of question and answer, but in that of a narrative, and, when completed, shall be read over to the witness, and signed by him in the presence of the Judge and of the parties to the suit, or their vakeels. In case the witness shall refuse to sign the deposition, the Judge shall sign the same, and record the reason, if any, given by the witness for such refusal, together with such remarks thereon as the Judge shall think fit to make. It shall be in the discretion of the Judge to take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question and answer, if there shall appear any special reason for so doing, or any party or his vakeel shall require it. If any question put to a witness be objected to by either of the parties or their vakeels, and the Court shall allow the same to be put, the question and answer shall be taken down, and the objection, and the name of the party making it, shall be noticed in taking down the depositions, together with the decision of the Court upon the objection. The Judge shall also record such remarks as he may think material respecting the demeanor of the witness while under examination. In cases where an appeal does not lie to a higher tribunal, it shall not be necessary to take down the depositions of the witness in writing at length; but the Judge shall make a short memorandum of the substance of what each witness may have deposed at the trial of the cause, and such memorandum shall be written and signed with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

129. If a witness be about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or other good and sufficient cause can be shown to the satisfaction of the Court why his examination should be taken immediately, it shall be competent to the Court, upon the application of either party, at any time after summons issued, to take the examination of such witness forthwith, or on any day that may be fixed for that purpose, of which due notice shall be given to the other party if the day be fixed in his absence. The witness shall be examined, and his deposition shall be taken down in writing in the manner hereinafter prescribed; and the deposition so taken down may be read in evidence at the trial, or any hearing of the cause.

But a witness may for special cause be examined immediately.

130. All witnesses shall be examined without oath or affirmation or any warning as a necessary preliminary to their giving evidence, and they shall, upon such examination, be bound to speak the truth as they would have been bound by an oath, or a sanction tantamount to an oath.

Witnesses to be examined without oath, affirmation, or warning.

Of Commissions to examine absent Witnesses and make local Inquiries.

131. When the evidence of a witness is required who is resident at some place distant more than a hundred miles from the place where the Court is held, or who is unable from sickness or infirmity to attend before the Judge to be personally examined, or is a person exempted by law absolutely, or at the discretion of the Court, by reason of rank, sex, or other special cause, from personal appearance in Court, the Court may, on the application of any of the parties to the suit, order a Commission to issue for the examination of the witness on interrogatories or otherwise, and may, by the same or any subsequent order or orders, give all such directions for taking such examinations, as well within the jurisdiction of the Court wherein the suit shall be pending as without, as may appear reasonable and just. If the witness be resident within the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the Commission, the Commission may be issued to any officer of the Court, or to any subordinate Court, or to any other person or persons whom the Judge may think proper to appoint. If the witness be resident at some place which is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the Commission, and not within the local jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Supreme Court, but within its general jurisdiction, the Commission shall ordinarily be issued to the Court within whose particular jurisdiction the witness may reside, or which can most conveniently execute the same; but under special circumstances, which may appear to render a different course expedient, the Commission may be issued to any other person or persons whom the Court issuing the Commission may think proper to appoint.

133. Where the evidence is required of a witness who is resident at some place beyond the general jurisdiction of the Sudder Court, whether such place be within the said Presidency or within the territories in the possession of the East India Company or not, the application for a Commission to examine the witness must in all cases be made to the Sudder Court. If the suit in which the evidence of the witness is required be pending in some other Court than the Sudder Court, the application must be accompanied by a certificate from the Court in which the suit is pending, that the application is made with its permission. In all cases of an application to the Sudder Court for a Commission to examine a witness, the Commission may be issued to any person or persons whom the Sudder Court may think proper to appoint; and whenever a Commission is issued from the Sudder Court for examination of a witness in a suit pending in any other Court, the Commission shall be made returnable to the Court in which the suit is pending.

But no deposition taken under a Commission shall be read in evidence without the consent of the party against whom the same may be offered, unless it be proved that the deponent is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, or dead, or unable from sickness or infirmity to attend to be personally examined, or distant, without collusion, more than a hundred miles from the place where the Court is held, or exempted by law absolutely, or at the discretion of the Court, from personal appearance in Court, or unless the Court shall, at its discretion, dispense with the proof of any of the above circumstances, or shall authorize the deposition of any witness being read in evidence, notwithstanding proof that the causes for taking such deposition have ceased at the time of reading the same; and after the witness shall be produced, and shall have delivered his testimony, it shall be lawful for the Court, at its discretion, to authorize the reading of the deposition. And all depositions taken under any Commission which may be issued as aforesaid, being duly certified, may be read, at the discretion of the Court, without proof of the signature to such certificate.

When depositions may be read in evidence.

135. In suits regarding lands or houses, or their limits or boundaries, in which the Court may deem a local investigation to be requisite or proper, for the purpose of elucidating the matters in dispute, the Court may issue a Commission to any person whom it may think proper to appoint, directing him to make such investigation, and to report thereon to the Court. In all such cases, unless otherwise directed by the order of appointment, the Commissioner shall have power to examine, not only such witnesses as may be produced to him by the parties or any of them, but any other person or persons whom he may think proper to call upon to give evidence in the matters referred to him; and persons not attending on the requistion of the Commissioner, or refusing to give their testimony, or to sign their depositions, or being guilty of any contempt to the Commissioner during the investigation of the matters committed to him, shall be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties, and punishments, by orders made by the Commissioner, as they would incur for the same offences in suits tried before the Court; provided that the Commissioner shall report the order to the Court, and obtain its consent thereto, which is to be signified by the Judge's signing the order. The Commissioner shall, after such local inspection as he may deem necessary, and after reducing to writing, in the manner hereinbefore prescribed for taking the depositions of witnesses in the prsence of the Judge, the depositions of such witnesses as he may have examined, shall return the depositions, together with his report in writing, subscribed with his name, to the Court issuing the Commission. The report and depositions shall be taken as evidence in the cause, and shall form part of the record; but it shall be competent to the Court, or to the parties or any of them, with the permission of the Court, to examine the Commissioner personally in open Court, touching any of the matters referred to him, or mentioned in his report, or the manner in which he may have conducted the investigation. The Court may order such sum to be paid to the Commissioner as may be thought reasonable for his trouble and expenses, and the sum so ordered to be paid shall be considered as costs in the cause, unless the Court shall otherwise direct.

The report of the Commissioner to be taken as evidence in the cause, but he may be examined in person.

136. In any suit or other judicial proceeding in which an investigation or adjustment of accounts may be necessary, it shall be lawful for the Judge to appoint any person whom he may think proper to be a Commissioner, for the purpose of making such investigation or adjustment, and to direct that the parties or their attorneys or vakeels shall attend upon the Commissioner during such investigation or adjustment. In all such cases the Judge shall furnish the Commissioner with such part of the procedings and such detailed instructions as may appear necessary for his information and guidance; and the instructions shall distinctly specify whether the Commissioner is merely to transmit the proceedings which he may hold on the inquiry, or also to report his own opinion on the point referred for his investigation. The proceedings of the Commissioner are to be received in evidence in the case, unless the Judge may have reason to be dissatisfied with them; in which case he will make such further inquiry as may be requisite, and will pass such ultimate judgment or order as may appear to him to be right and proper in the circumstances of the case.

Punishment may be remitted on submission of the offender.

Chapter VII.

REFERENCE TO ARBITRATION.

Reference on application of the parties.

1. If the parties to a suit are desirous that the matters in difference between them shall be referred to the final decision of one or more arbitrator or arbitrators, they may apply to the Court at any time before final judgment for an order of reference.

Application how to be made.

2. The application shall be made by the parties in person, or through one of the vakeels of the Court, specially authorized in that behalf by an instrument in writing, which shall be presented to the Judge at the time of making the application, and shall be filed with the proceedings in the cause.

Appointment of arbitrators may be made by Court at the desire of parties.

3. If the parties cannot agree with respect to the arbitrator or arbitrators, or if the person or persons nominated by them shall refuse to accept the arbitration, or having accepted it shall refuse to act, and the parties are desirous that the nomination shall be made by the Court, the Court shall appoint some proper person or persons to be the arbitrator or arbitrators, as the case may be.

Order of reference.

4. The Court shall fix such time as it may think reasonable for the delivery of the award, and shall by an order under its seal, in which the time so fixed shall be specified, refer to the arbitrator or arbitrators the matters in difference in the suit between the parties.

When the reference is to two or more, the order shall provide for difference of opinion.

5. If the reference be to two or more arbitrators, provision shall be made in the order for a difference of opinion among the arbitrators, by the appointment of an umpire, or by declaring that the decision shall be with the majority, or by empowering the arbitrators to appoint their own umpire, or otherwise as may be agreed upon between the parties; or if they cannot agree as to any of these particulars, as the Court itself may determine.

Power to Court to direct arbitration.

6. If on the day mentioned in the summons or at any subsequent hearing of the cause it shall appear to the Judge that the matter in dispute between the parties consists wholly or in part of matters of mere account which cannot conveniently be tried before him, it shall be lawful for him, at his discretion, to order that such matter of account be referred to an arbitrator appointed by the parties, or to an officer of Court, or to some other proper person whom the Judge may think fit to appoint, upon such terms as to costs and the remuneration of the arbitrator, or otherwise, as the Judge shall think reasonable.

Court may determine particular facts or points of law.

7. If it shall appear to the Judge that the allowance or disallowance of any particular item or items in such account depends upon a question of law or fact fit to be decided by the Court, it shall be lawful for the Judge to decide such question of law or fact, and his decision thereupon shall be taken and acted upon by the arbitrator as conclusive.

If action be commenced by one party to a deed of arbitration, Court may stay proceedings.

8. Whenever the parties to any deed or instrument in writing shall agree that any then existing or future differences between them or any of them shall be referred to arbitration, and any one or more of the parties so agreeing, or any person claiming through or under him or them, shall nevertheless commence any suit against the other party or parties, or against any person or persons claiming through or under him or them, in respect of the matters so agreed to be referred or any of them, it shall be lawful to the Court in which the suit is brought on application by the defendant or defendants at his or their first appearance before the Judge, in obedience to any summons that may be issued in such suit, upon being satisfied that no sufficient reason exists why such matters cannot be or ought not to be referred to arbitration according to such agreement as aforesaid, and that the defendant was at the time of the commencement of such suit and still is ready and willing to join and concur it all acts necessary and proper for causing such matters so to be decided by arbitration, to make an order for staying all proceedings in such suit, on such terms as to costs or otherwise as to such Court may seem fit: provided always, that any such order may at any time thereafter be discharged or varied as justice may require.

Powers of arbitrators.

9. Upon any reference by an order of Court, whether compulsory or by consent, the arbitrator or arbitrators and umpire shall have all the like powers as the Court would have in the like circumstances; and the Court shall issue the same processes to the parties and witnesses whom the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, or the parties, may desire to have examined, as the Court is authorized to issue in causes tried before it; and persons not attending in consequence of such process, or making any default, or refusing to give their testimony, or to sign their depositions, or being guilty of any contempt to the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, during the investigation of the suit, shall be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties, and punishments, by orders made by the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, as they would incur for the same offences in suits tried before the Court; provided that the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, shall report the order, with the reason for making it, to the Court, and obtain its consent thereto, which is to be signified by the Judge's signing the order.

Extension of time for making award.

10. In cases where the arbitrators or umpire shall not have been able to complete the award within the period specified in the order from want of the necessary evidence or information, or other good and sufficient cause, the Court may from time to time enlarge the period for the delivery of the award if it shall think proper. In any case in which an umpire shall have been appointed it shall be lawful for him to enter on the reference in lieu of the arbitrators, if they shall have allowed their time or their extended time to expire without making an award, or shall have delivered to any party or to the umpire a notice in writing stating that they cannot agree.

In case of death, incapacity, or refusal to act of arbitrators or umpire, Court may appoint others instead.

11. If, in any case of reference to arbitration by an order of Court, the appointed arbitrator or arbitrators or umpire shall die, or refuse, or become incapable to act, it shall be lawful for the Court, on the application of the parties, or any of them, to appoint a new arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, in the place or stead of the person or persons so dying, or refusing or becoming incapable to act; and where two arbitrators are at liberty by the terms of the order of reference to appoint an umpire and do not appoint an umpire, then and in every such instance any of the parties may serve the arbitrators with a written notice to appoint an umpire; and if within seven clear days after such notice shall have been served no umpire be appointed, it shall be lawful for the Court upon the application of the party having served such notice as aforesaid, upon proof to its satisfaction of such notice having been served, to appoint an umpire. In any case of appointment under this Article, the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire so appointed, shall have the like power to act in the reference, as if their name or names had been inserted in the original order of reference.

Award how to be submitted to Court.

12. When a final award in a cause shall be made, either by the arbitrators or umpire, it shall be submitted to the Court under the signature of the person or persons by whom it may be made, together with all the proceedings, depositions, and exhibits in the cause.

Arbitrator may state special case.

13. It shall be lawful for the arbitrator or arbitrators and umpire, upon any reference, by an order of Court, whether compulsory or by consent of parties, if he or they shall think fit, and if it is not provided to the contrary, to state his or their award as to the whole or any part thereof in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court.

Power to send back to arbitrator.

14. In any case where reference shall be made to arbitration as aforesaid, the Court shall have power at any time and from time to time to remit the matters referred, or any or either of them, to the re-consideration and re-determination of the same arbitrator or arbitrators or umpire, upon such terms as to costs and otherwise as to the said Court may seem proper.

Judgment to be pronounced in terms of the award.

15. If the Court shall not see cause to remit the matters referred for re-consideration in manner aforesaid, it shall pronounce judgment conformable to the award, unless the same shall be set aside, or to its own opinion on the special case if the award shall have been submitted to it in the form of a special case, and the decree shall be carried into execution in the same manner as other decrees of the Court.

Application to set aside the award.

16. All applications to set aside any award made on a compulsory reference or a reference by consent of the parties, shall be made within ten days after the same has been submitted to the Court; and if no such application is made, or if no rule is granted thereon, or if any rule granted thereon is afterwards discharged, judgment shall be pronounced as mentioned in the last preceding Article, and such judgment shall be final between the parties.

Chapter VIII.

7. The special case shall be filed with the proper officer of the Court, and shall be numbered and registered as a cause between some or one of the parties interested or claiming to be interested as plaintiffs or plaintiff, and the others or other of them as defendants or defendant; but it shall not be necessary to issue any process for summoning the defendants or defendant.

Hearing and disposal of the case.

9. The special case shall be set down for hearing as an ordinary suit, and the Court, after hearing the parties or their vakeels, shall proceed to determine the questions raised therein, or any of them, and to declare its opinion thereon, and, so far as the case shall admit of the same, upon the right involved therein, without proceeding to administer any relief consequent upon such declaration; and every such declaration of the Court shall have the same force and effect as such declaration would have had, and shall be as binding to the same extent as such declaration would have been, if contained in a judgment pronounced in a contested suit. Provided that, if upon the hearing of such special case as aforesaid, the Court shall be of opinion that the questions raised thereby, or any of them, cannot properly be decided upon such case, the Court may refuse to decide the same.

Chapter IX.

Appeals from Final Decrees.

In what cases appeals shall lie from decisions of Judges, Principal Sudder Ameens, and Moonsiffs.

The decision of the Zillah Judge in appeal is final.

4. The decision of the Judge in appeals from the decision of the Principal Sudder Ameen, or Moonsiff, shall be final; provided, however, that it shall be competent to the Judge, at the time of deciding an appeal from the judgment of a Principal Sudder Ameen or Moonsiff, to record his opinion, certifying in his judgment his reasons for the same, that the case is one for revision by the Sudder Court, and when he shall have so certified, the Sudder Court shall admit a special appeal from the decision of the Zillah Judge, in the event of either of the parties making application to that effect.

In original suits the appeal from the Zillah Judge shall be to the Sudder Court.

5. The appeal from the decisions of the Judge, in original suits, shall be to the Sudder Court.

How Appeals are to be preferred.

Appeal to be preferred by a memorandum to be filed within specified time.

6. The appeal shall be made in the form of a memorandum as herein-after prescribed, which may be presented in the Appellate Court, or in the Court in which the decision objected to was passed for transmission to the Appellate Court. In either case, the memorandum must be presented within the times herein-after specified, unless the appellant shall, by a petition to the Appellate Court, show sufficient cause for not having presented it within such limited periods; that is to say, within thirty-one days if the appeal be to the Zillah Judge, or be to the Sudder Court from a decision of a Court of original jurisdiction constituted by one or more of its own Judges, and within ninety-one days if the appeal be to the Sudder Court from the decision of a Zillah Judge, Principal Sudder Ameen, or Moonsiff; the days to be reckoned in all the cases as immediately following and exclusive of the day on which judgment was pronounced.

Time may be extended by an application.

7. An application for an extension of the time for presenting a memorandum of appeal may be made directly to the Appellate Court, or through the intervention of the Lower Court, at the option of the applicant. If the application for extension of time be made to the Lower Court, that Court shall record the reasons assigned for the application, and shall transmit a copy of its proceedings to the Appellate Court.

What the memorandum is to contain.

8. Every memorandum of appeal shall set forth concisely, and under distinct heads, grounds of objection to the decision appealed against, without any argument or narrative, and such grounds shall be numbered consecutively. But the appellant shall not be tied down to the objections set forth by him in his memorandum of appeal.

Form of memorandum.

The memorandum of appeal shall be in the following form, or to the following effect:—

10. Within one month from the date on which the memorandum of appeal shall be presented in the Lower Court, or one month from the date on which intimation shall be received by the Lower Court from the Appellate Court, that the memorandum of appeal has been presented in the Appellate Court, unless the Appellate Court shall think proper to enlarge the time, and then within such enlarged time, the Judge of the Lower Court shall, except as provided in the next succeeding Article, certify under his hand and the seal of his Court the record duly made up and authenticated, including authenticated copies of all his own material proceedings in the cause, and the original depositions, exhibits, and every original paper read in the cause, together with the written statements, if any, that may have been presented by the parties, or any of them, and received and recorded by the Judge, and shall transmit the record so made up to the Appellate Court. Previous to transmitting the above-mentioned papers to the Appellate Court the Judge of the Lower Court shall cause true and faithful copies of all the originals to be made out and authenticated by the proper officer of his Court, and deposited in the Court in lieu of the originals. The copies shall be records of the Court, and shall be received in evidence in any other Court in the same way as originals. In cases where any original deposition or other original proceedings or matter whatsoever shall have been previously entered in a book, which may likewise contain other proceedings in other distinct cases, or any other matter, so that such original papers cannot be transmitted to the Appellate Court without the other proceedings or matters, the Judge of the Lower Court, within the time and in the manner before directed, shall certify a true and authentic copy of such original papers, and that the original of each copy so transmitted is entered in such book. In cases where any original paper shall have been mislaid or lost, and a copy of it shall have been entered in any book or proceedings of the Court, the copy shall have the force and effect of the original, and the Judge shall transmit a copy of it to the Appellate Court, and shall in like manner certify that the original, after due search, cannot be found. Of staying and executing Decrees under Appeal.

When and on what terms execution of decree may be stayed.

12. When any party or parties appealing is or are directed to pay any sum of money, or to perform any duty, or when the decree is for the possession of land or any other property, real or personal, the Court whose judgment is appealed from shall and is hereby empowered to award that its judgment shall be carried into execution, or that sufficient security shall be given for the performance of such judgment; provided always, that where the Court of original jurisdiction shall think fit to order the judgment to be executed, security shall be taken from the other party or parties for the due performance of such order or judgment as may be passed in the Court of Appeal. But this decision shall itself be subject to appeal.

Of Procedure in Appeals from final Decrees.

How the appeal is to be entered.

13. When a memorandum of appeal shall have been presented in or transmitted to an Appellate Court, the clerk (or proper officer) of the Appellate Court shall endorse thereon the date of presentment if it was presented in the Appellate Court, or the date of receipt if it was transmitted from the Lower Court, and shall register the appeal in a book to be kept for the purpose, and called the Register of Appeals

15. It shall not be necessary in any Court of Appeal to take any security for costs, but it shall be in the discretion of every such Court of Appeal to demand security for costs from the appellant or not, as it shall see fit, before the respondent is called upon to answer.

Day to be fixed for hearing the appeal.

16. A day shall be fixed by the Appellate Court for the hearing and disposal of the appeal; which day shall not be earlier, in cases in which a record of the suit shall be transmitted by the Lower Court, than forty-two days from the day on which the record may have been received in the Appellate Court, and shall not be earlier, in cases appealable to the Sudder Court, when the officer is required to attend the Appellate Court with the original record of the suit, than twenty-one days from the presentment of the memorandum of appeal, but shall otherwise be as early, in all cases, as can be conveniently fixed, with a due regard to the state of business in the Court, the days to be reckoned in all the cases as exclusive of the day of hearing, and of the day on which the record may have been received, or the memorandum of appeal presented in the Appellate Court. Notice of the day which has been fixed for the hearing of the appeal shall be sent by the proper officer of the Appellate Court to the proper officer of the Lower Court from the decree of which the appeal has been preferred, and shall be served on the appellant and respondent, in the same way as hereinbefore provided for in respect to the service of a summons. The notice to the appellant shall contain an additional intimation, that if he does not appear in the Appellate Court on the day so fixed for the hearing of the appeal, either in person or by an advocate, attorney, or vakeel of the Appellate Court, his appeal will be dismissed for want of prosecution. And the notice to the respondent shall contain an intimation, that if he does not appear in the Appellate Court on the day so fixed for the hearing of the appeal, the case will be heard and decided ex parte in his absence

The parties to be in attendance on day so fixed.

On the day in that behalf mentioned in the notices, and unless the Court shall otherwise direct, from day to day, until the cause is called on, the parties, appellant and respondent, shall be in attendance in the Appellate Court in person or by an advocate, attorney, or vakeel of the Court, duly empowered in manner hereinbefore mentioned, to represent them in all matters relating to the prosecution or defence of the appeal.

18. If on the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal, or on any other day subsequent thereto on which the cause may be called on, the appellant shall not appear in person, or by an advocate, attorney, or vakeel of the Court, the appeal shall be dismissed for default. If the appellant appears in person, or by advocate, attorney, or vakeel, and the respondent shall not appear in person, or by advocate, attorney, or vakeel, the appeal shall be heard ex-parte in his absence.

Consequences of non-appearance.

19. Where an appeal is dismissed for default, an intimation of the dismissal shall be sent to the Court of original jurisdiction, and the costs of preparing copies of papers, and making up and transmitting the record, may be realized from the appellant, under an order of that Court, to be enforced in the same manner as a decree of Court.

When an appeal is dismissed, intimation to be sent to the Lower Court.

20. In all cases in which an appeal shall be dismissed for default of prosecution, it shall be competent to the appellant to apply within reasonable time to the Appellate Court, for the re-admission of his appeal. The application shall be accompanied with a certificate from the Court of original jurisdiction, that the costs mentioned in the preceding Article, when ordered to be realized from the appellant, have been fully paid and satisfied; and if the Appellate Court shall think proper to grant such application, a day shall be thereupon fixed for the hearing of the appeal, and a fresh notice shall be issued to the respondent, to be served in the same way as the first notice, and with the like additional intimation as is herein-before provided; but it shall not be necessary to issue or serve any notice on the appellant.

How an appeal dismissed for default may be restored.

21. 22. No decision shall be reversed or altered, nor shall any case be referred back to the Court of original jurisdiction, on account of any error, defect, or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case.

No decision to be reversed for irregularity.

23. If the Court of original jurisdiction shall have disposed of the case upon any preliminary point so as to exclude any evidence of fact which shall appear to the Court of Appeal essential to the rights of the parties, and the decree of the Lower Court shall be reversed by the decree in appeal, the Appellate Court may, if it think right, remit the case to the Lower Court, and cause the papers in the suit, together with a copy of the decree in appeal, to be transmitted to such Lower Court, with directions to proceed in the investigation of the merits of the case, and pass a decree therein.

When a case may be remanded by Appellate Court.

24. It shall not be competent to the Appellate Court to remand a case for a second decision by the Court of original jurisdiction, except as provided in the preceding Article.

Power to remand limited as above.

25. When there is sufficient evidence upon the record of the Lower Court to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce a satisfactory judgment, the Appellate Court shall finally determine the case, notwithstanding that the judgment of the Lower Court has proceeded wholly upon some other ground.

When the Appellate Court may dispose of a case, though the Lower Court has decided on other grounds.

26. It shall not be competent to the parties in an appeal to produce additional evidence, whether of exhibits or witnesses; but if it appears that the Lower Court refused to admit competent evidence, or if the Appellate Court itself requires the production of exhibits or witnesses, as necessary to enable it to pronounce a satisfactory judgment, or if any other substantial cause demands a deviation from the ordinary rule, the Court may allow additional exhibits to be received, and the same and other witnesses to be examined; provided that whenever this power is exercised, the reasons for exercising it be recorded on the proceedings by the Appellate Court.

When the Appellate Court may call for fresh evidence.

27. Whenever additional evidence is permitted to be received, it shall be competent to the Court of Appeal to take such evidence before itself, or to require the Lower, or any other Court, or to empower any person, to take such evidence; and it shall also be competent to the Court of Appeal to prescribe the mode by which such evidence shall be taken; and the Court of Appeal shall be at liberty to proceed by all or any of the modes aforesaid.

How additional evidence is to be taken.

28. In all cases where additional evidence is permitted to be taken, the Court shall define the point or points to which the evidence is to be confined, and record the same in the minutes of the proceedings.

Points to be defined.

Whenever a review is granted, the parties are to be summoned.

The Principal Sudder Ameens and Moonsiffs shall at the close of each month send to the Judge of the Zillah a list of the cases in which they may have admitted a review of judgment, with a statement of the grounds on which the review has been admitted, and the Judge shall in like manner, at the close of each month, send to the Sudder Court a list of the cases in which he may have admitted a review of judgment, together with the grounds on which the review has been admitted, and shall at the same time transmit to the Sudder Court any lists which he may have received from the Principal Sudder Ameens and Moonsiffs of cases in which they may have admitted a review of judgment, together with such remarks as he may think proper thereon.

General Orders by the Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council.

Fort William, 12th February 1857.

No. 605, dated 10*th February* 1857.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to appoint Lieutenant E. B. Gurdon, of the 33rd Regiment Native Infantry, to be Adjutant of the 7th Regiment of Infantry, Gwalior Contingent, vice Lieutenant W. Rose, promoted.

No. 606, dated 10*th February* 1857.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to grant to Colonel Sir A. Bogle, Kt., Commissioner of the Tenasserim and Martaban Provinces, leave of absence, for two months, to visit the Presidency, preparatory to applying for further leave to Europe.

No 234 of 1857.—The following Notification, from the Financial Department, is published in General Orders :—

No. 11, dated 6*th February* 1857.—Read an endorsement from the Home Department, No. 122, dated the 23rd Ultimo, forwarding for consideration and orders a letter, No. 14, dated the 7th Idem, from the Chief Secretary to the Government of Fort St. George, having reference to the absence of Uncovenanted Servants drawing salaries of less than 100 Rupees a month.

RESOLUTION.—On the 25th July last, it was resolved by this Government, with a view to ensure a correct calculation of the periods of Service entitling Uncovenanted Servants to pension, that the Heads of Public Offices and Departments under the control of the several Governments should furnish, on the 1st May of each year, to the Civil Auditors and the Military Auditors General of the several Presidencies, an Annual Return showing the Leave of Absence granted during the year, (preceding,) under the New Uncovenanted Civil Service Absentee Rules, to those Uncovenanted Servants whose leave might not have been notified in the Gazette.

Referring to this Resolution, the Government of Madras observes that, as the New Rules are restricted in their operation to Uncovenanted Servants in the receipt of salaries of Rupees 100 a month and upwards, the above orders would not appear to apply to Uncovenanted Servants whose salaries are below that amount, and that if such be the intention of this Government, there is nothing to prevent the entire periods of absence of Uncovenanted Servants of the latter class counting as service towards pension. Definite orders, however, are solicited on this point and also on a question raised by the Civil Auditor at Madras "whether it is not left optional with the Heads of Offices to grant leave of absence to persons whose salary is less than 100 Rupees a month, for a limited period, either on Sick certificate or private affairs, making such stoppages as they may think proper, the stoppages thus made being paid to the individuals performing the duties of the absentee, and no extra expense being incurred to the State."

On this solicitation of the Government of Madras, the Right Hon'ble the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that, in granting leave of absence either on Medical certificate or on private affairs to Uncovenanted Servants whose salaries are less than 100 Rupees per month, the Heads of Offices shall be guided by the spirit of the Rules prescribed for those servants who are in the receipt of salaries of Rupees 100 a month and upwards; that all cases in which leave is so granted to Uncovenanted Servants whose salaries are less than 100 Rupees per month, shall be reported to the Civil Auditor and the Military Auditor General respectively in the manner prescribed in the Orders of the 25th July last; and that all past leave enjoyed by any such Uncovenanted Servant shall be counted as service under the orders of the Honorable the Court of Directors noted in the margin, although such leave may have exceeded the period allowed under the new Uncovenanted Civil Service Absentee Rules.

Para. 44 of Court's Despatch No. 38 of 1856, dated 13th May, published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 16th July last, page 1136.

Suits for real property in Zillah Courts subject to different Sudder Courts.

18. Declaratory suit.

19. No suit in any of the Civil Courts shall be open to objection on the ground that a merely declaratory decree or order is sought thereby, and it shall be lawful for the Court to make binding declarations of right without granting consequential relief.

20 The judicial decisions of the Courts of Justice shall be subject to revision only by the constituted Courts of appellate jurisdiction, or by themselves, under the rules of the code of procedure applicable to revi ws of judgment.

By whom judicial decisions may be revised.

The authority shall in all cases be in writing, and shall be filed with the proper officer of the Court. When so filed, it shall be considered to be in full force until revoked, and the revocation shall be intimated in writing to the officer; and all notices given to, or processes served on, the vakeel of either party, or left at the office or ordinary residence of such vakeel, relative to the suit, and whether the same be for the personal attendance of the party or not, shall be presumed to be duly communicated and made known to the party whom the vakeel represents, and shall be as effectual for all purposes in relation to the suit as if the same had been given to or served on the party in person, unless the Court shall otherwise direct.

2. In all cases in which a party shall appear in person, and the cause shall not be decided on the day of his appearance, he shall enter his name and place of abode in a book to be kept for that purpose by the proper officer of the Court, if the Court shall determine upon his application that his place of abode is within eight miles from the Court-house by the nearest road; otherwise, he shall enter in the said book the name and place of abode of some person residing at a place which the Court shall determine to be within such distance of the Court-house, on whom he may wish that all notices or process in the cause should be served on his behalf. And all notices or process relative to the suit which may thereafter be left at the place so entered in the register, shall be deemed good service on the party, and shall be as effectual for all purposes relative to the suit as if the same had been served on the party himself in person, unless the Court shall otherwise direct. If no such entry as aforesaid shall be made in the said register, the fixing up of such notices or process in some conspicuous place in the office of the clerk or other proper officer of the Court, and also in some conspicuous place in the Court-house, shall in like manner be deemed to be good service, and shall be as effectual for all purposes relative to the suit as if such entry had been made, and the notice or process had been left at the place so entered in the register.

The authority shall in all cases be in writing, and shall be signed by the native officer or soldier in the presence of his commanding officer, who shall countersign the same, and it shall be filed with the proper officer of the Court. When so filed, the counter-signature of the commanding officer shall be sufficient proof that the authority was duly executed, and that the native officer or soldier by whom it was granted could not obtain a furlough or leave of absence for the purpose of prosecuting or defending the suit in person.

Native officers or soldiers who cannot obtain leave of absence may authorize any person to appear for them;

4. Any person who may be authorized, as in the last preceding Article mentioned, by a native officer or soldier to prosecute or defend a suit in his stead, shall be competent to prosecute or defend it in person in the same manner as the native officer or soldier could do if present; or he may appoint a vakeel of the Court to prosecute or defend the suit on behalf of such native officer or soldier. And all notices or process relative to the suit which may be served upon any person who shall be so authorized as aforesaid by a native officer or soldier, or upon any vakeel who shall be appointed as aforesaid by such person to act for or on behalf of such native officer or soldier, shall be as effectual for all purposes relative to the suit as if the same had been served on the party in person or on a vakeel directly appointed by him.

Two notices in writing to be delivered to the proper officer of the Court.

(1.) If the party on whom the notice is to be served shall have employed a vakeel to act for him in the cause, the notice shall be served on such vakeel by delivering the notice to him personally, or by leaving it at his office, or ordinary place of residence.

How the notice is to be served

(2) If the party shall not have employed a vakeel to act for him in the cause, and shall have his place of abode within eight miles from the Court-house by the nearest road, the notice shall be served on him by delivering it to him personally, or leaving it at his place of abode.

(3.) If the party shall not have employed a vakeel to act for him in the cause, and shall not have his place of abode within eight miles from the Court-house by the nearest road, but shall have entered in the book, to be kept for that purpose by the proper officer, the name and place of abode of some person residing within such distance of the Court-house on whom he may wish that all notices or process in the cause should be served on his behalf, the notices shall be served by delivering the same to such person, or by leaving it at his place of abode.

(4) If the party shall not have employed a vakeel to act for him in the cause, and shall neither have his own place of abode within eight miles from the Court-house by the nearest road, nor shall have entered in the book to be kept for that purpose the name and place of abode of some person residing within such distance of the Court-house on whom he may wish that all notices or process in the cause should be served on his behalf, the notice shall in like manner be served by delivering the same to the party in person or by leaving it at his place of abode; unless the notice be for some day subsequent to the first hearing of the cause, in which case it shall be sufficient service of the notice if it be fixed up in some conspicuous place in the office of the clerk or proper officer of the Court, and also in some conspicuous place of the Court-house.

73. On the day in that behalf mentioned in the summons, and from day to day, if necessary, until the cause is called on, the parties shall be in attendance at the Court-house in person or by a vakeel of the Court duly empowered to represent them in all matters relating to the prosecution or defence of the action, as the case may be.

75. When there are two or more plaintiffs, any one or more of them may be authorized to appear, plead, and act for the other or others of them; and in like manner, when there are two or more defendants, any one or more of them may be authorized to appear, plead, and act for the other or others of them; provided that the authority shall in all cases be in writing, and shall be filed with the proper officer of the Court; when so filed, it shall be as effectual to all intents and purposes as if the person so authorized to appear, plead, and act, were a vakeel of the Court.

When there are several plaintiffs or defendants, each may authorize the other to appear for him.

76. Nothing in the preceding Article contained shall be taken to prevent any one of two or more plaintiffs or defendants from appearing for the other or others of them respectively, without any special authority, when already entitled by law so to do by reason of unity of interest in the matter in dispute, or otherwise howsoever.

Framing of Issues.

93. For the purpose of assisting the Judge in framing the issues, the parties or their vakeels may tender at the first hearing of the cause written statements of their respective cases, which statements the Judge shall receive and peruse, and put on the record; but he may, nevertheless, frame the issues from the allegations of fact which he collects from the oral examinations, notwithstanding any difference between such allegations of fact, and the allegations of fact contained in the written statements so tendered by the parties or their vakeels.

If the Judge think proper, he may, instead of absolutely rejecting the written statement, receive and record the same, after he shall have struck out all such parts of the written statement as he may consider to be argumentative, unnecessary, or irrelevant; and such parts of any written statement as may be so struck out by the Judge shall not be allowed in the costs ordered to be paid by the opposite party, if costs be decreed against him. If the Judge shall be of opinion that the issues cannot be correctly framed without the examination of some person other than the persons already before the Court, or without the reading of some document not produced by any of such persons, he may adjourn the framing of the issues to a future day, and may compel the attendance of such person, or the production of the document by the person in whose hands it may be, by subpœna or other suitable process.

Amendment of issues.

99. At any time before the decision of the case, the Judge may amend the issues on such terms as to him shall seem fit, and all such amendments as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real question or controversy between the parties shall be so made

100. If either party is dissatisfied with the issues as finally framed by the Court, such party may appeal upon that ground after the decision of the case.

Of Issues by Agreement of Parties.

Questions of fact, or of law or equity, may be stated by the parties in the form of an issue, and an agreement may be entered into for the payment of a sum of money, or the doing or the refraining to do a particular act, according to the result of the issue.

101. When the parties to a suit are agreed as to the question or questions of fact, or of law or equity, to be decided between them, they may, at any time after the issue of the summons, state the same in the form of an issue, and enter into an agreement in writing, which shall not be subject to any stamp duty, that upon the finding of the Judge in the affirmative or the negative of such issue a sum of money fixed by the parties, or to be ascertained by the Judge upon a question inserted in the issue for that purpose, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them, or that some property specified in the agreement, and in dispute in the suit, shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them, or that one or more of the parties shall do or perform some particular legal act or acts, or shall refrain from doing or performing some particular act or acts, specified in the agreement, and having reference to the matter in dispute, either with or without the costs of the suit.

The Judge, if satisfied that the agreement was executed bond fide, may decree accordingly.

102. If the Judge shall be satisfied, after an examination of the parties, or their vakeels, or taking such evidence as he may deem proper, that the agreement was duly executed by the parties, and that the parties have a bond fide interest in the decision of such question or questions, and that the same is or are fit to be tried or decided, he may proceed to record and try the same, and deliver his finding or opinion thereon in the same manner as if the issue had been framed by himself in an ordinary suit, and may upon his finding or deciding in such issue, give judgment for the sum so fixed by the parties or so ascertained as aforesaid, or otherwise according to the terms of the agreement; and upon the judgment which shall be so given, decree shall follow and may be executed in the same way as if the judgment had been pronounced in a contested suit.

When the Suit may be disposed of at the First Hearing.

If the summons was for a final disposal, if the case, or the parties consent, suit may be decided at first hearing.

103. If the Court shall be satisfied that the questions of law or fact in which the parties are at issue do not require any further argument or proof than such as the parties or their vakeels can at once supply, the Court may at once decide such question, if the summons have been issued for a final disposal of the cause; and if the summons have been issued for a settlement of issues only, the Court may in like manner at once decide the question, if the parties consent thereto.

otherwise, the hearing of the case to be postponed.

104. When the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, if the parties or either of them do not consent that the Court shall at once decide the questions of law or fact on which they may be at issue, or if the questions of law or fact on which they are at issue require further argument or proof than the parties or their vakeels can at once supply, the Judge shall postpone the further hearing of the cause, and shall fix a day for the production of further evidence, or for further argument, as the case may require.

Of Adjournments.

Judge may grant time, or adjourn to a future day.

105. The Judge may, at any stage of the suit, grant time to the parties, or either of them, and may from time to time adjourn the hearing of the cause as he may think fit; and in all such cases the party applying for time shall pay the costs occasioned by such adjournment, unless the Judge shall otherwise direct.

106 If on any day to which the hearing of the cause may be adjourned, the parties or either of them shall not appear in person or by vakeel, the Court may proceed to dispose of the cause in the manner specified in Article 74 or Article 77 of this Chapter, as the case may be, or may make such other order as may appear to be just and proper in the circumstances of the case.

How the Judge is to proceed if the parties fail to appear on the day fixed.

Of Summoning Witnesses.

107. The parties or their vakeels may at any time obtain, on application to the clerk or other proper officer of Court, summonses to witnesses or other persons, with or without a clause requiring the production of books, deeds, papers, and writings in their possession or control, and in such summons any number of names may be inserted.

Application for Summons.

108. The person applying for a summons shall pay to the clerk or proper officer of the Court such a sum of money as shall appear to the Court to be reasonable, to defray the travelling and other expenses of each witness, or other person mentioned in the summons, in passing to and from the Court in which he may be required to attend, and for one day's attendance If the Court be a subordinate Court, regard shall be had, in fixing the scale of such expenses, to the rules, if any, established by the Court to which such Court shall be immediately subordinate. The sum so paid to the officer shall be tendered to the witness or other person, at the time of serving the summons, if it can be served personally. In addition to the sum so paid, the Court may direct such further sum to the paid to the witness or other person as may appear to be necessary to defray his travelling and other expenses, and also the expenses of his detention under the summons, and in case of default in payment, may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the goods of the person ordered to pay the same, and the witness or other person summoned shall not be bound to give evidence, or produce any document until such sum shall be paid.

Expenses of witnesses to be paid before issue of summons.

109. Every summons for the attendance of any witness or other person, shall specify the time and place at which he is required to attend, and also the purpose for which his attendance is required and any particular document or documents which the witness or other person may be called on to produce shall be described in the summons with convenient certainty. The witness shall further be required to produce all deeds and documents in his possession relating to the subject of the suit, and shall be bound to produce them unless he shall satisfy the Judge that the notice to produce did not give him sufficient information.

Time and place of attendance to be specified in summons.

110. Any person, whether a party to a suit or not, may be summoned to produce a document, without being summoned to give evidence, and any person summoned merely to produce a document, shall be deemed to have complied with the summons, if he cause such document to be produced, instead of attending personally to produce the same.

111 Every summons shall be served by exhibiting the original, and delivering or tendering a copy; and the service shall in all cases be made a sufficient time before the time specified in the summons for the attendance of the witness, to allow him a reasonable time for preparation, and for travelling to the place at which his attendance is required.

How the summons shall be served.

112. Whenever it may be practicable, the service of the summons shall in all cases be upon the person thereby required to attend; but when he cannot be found, the service may be made on any adult member of his family residing with him

113. When the person required to attend cannot be found, and there is no adult member of his family on whom the summons can be served, the serving officer shall return the summons to the Court from whence it issued, with an endorsement thereon that he has been unable to serve it.

When the summons cannot be served it is to be returned to the Court

114. The serving officer shall, in all cases in which the summons has been served, endorse on the original summons the time and the manner where and how it was served.

115. If the person required to attend be resident within the jurisdiction of any other Court than that in which the suit is pending, whether such Court be within the said Presidency or not, summons shall be transmitted by the clerk or proper officer of the Court in which the suit is pending, to the clerk or proper officer of the Court within whose jurisdiction the person required to attend may reside; and the clerk or proper officer of the last mentioned Court shall, upon receipt thereof, deliver the same to the bailiff or other proper officer of his own Court, to be served in the manner above directed, and upon the return of the summons by the serving officer, it shall be transmitted to the clerk or proper officer of the Court from whence it originally issued.

How a summons on a witness who resides in another jurisdiction is to be served.

116. If any person for whose attendance either to give evidence or to produce a document, a summons shall be issued, cannot be served in either of the ways herein-before specified, the Court on being certified thereof by the return of the serving officer, and upon proof that the evidence of such witness or the production of the document is material, and that the witness absconds or keeps out of the way, may cause a proclamation requiring the attendance of such person to give evidence, or produce the document, at a time and place to be named therein, to be affixed in some conspicuous plan upon or near to his house or place of abode; and if such person shall not attend at the time and place to be named in such proclamation, his property (real and personal), to such amount as the Court shall deem reasonable, (but subject to the same limitation as to the articles exempt from attachment, as in case of attachment for arrears of rent), shall be liable, under an order of the Court, to attachment and sale.

When a witness absconds his property may be attached

117. The cost of the attachment shall be borne in the first instance by the party applying for it, and the Court issuing the summons and attachment shall not proceed to sale of the property if the witness shall appear and satisfy the Court that he did not abscond or keep out of the way to avoid service of a summons, and that he had not notice of the proclamation in time to attend at the time and place named therein. Upon the appearance of such witness the Court shall make such order in regard to the costs of the attachment as it shall deem fit. If the witness appearing shall fail to satisfy the Court that he did not abscond or keep out of the way to avoid service of a summons, and that he had not such a notice of the proclamation as aforesaid, it shall be in the discretion of the Court to order the property attached, or any part thereof, to be forfeited and sold for the purpose of satisfying all costs incurred in consequence of such default, or absconding or keeping out of the way, and any fine which the Court may deem fit to impose upon the witness under the provisions of Article 2 Chapter VI, or the Court may order the property to be released from the attachment upon payment of such costs and fine as aforesaid.

Of the Examination of Parties as Witnesses.

118. When a party to a suit appears in person at any hearing of the cause, he may be examined as a witness either in his own behalf or on behalf of any other party to the suit, in the same way as if he were not a party thereto.

Parties may be examined.

119. If any party to the suit shall require to enforce the attendance of any other party thereto as a witness, he shall, by himself or his vakeel, make a special application to the Court for an order that the party do attend, and shall show, to the satisfaction of the Court, sufficient grounds in support of such application, otherwise a summons shall not be issued.

120. The Court if it think fit so to do, may, before making such order, cause notice to be given to the party or his vakeel, fixing a day for such party to show cause why he should not attend and give evidence ; and may also, from time to time, if necessary, for good and sufficient cause, enlarge the time for such application.

The Court may first issue a notice to show cause.

121. In support of the cause shown, the Court shall receive any declaration in writing of the party, if signed by him and delivered into the Court by himself or his vakeel.

May receive a written declaration in support of the cause shown.

122. If no sufficient cause be shown on the day fixed, or upon any subsequent day to which the Court shall enlarge the time for that purpose, the Court shall issue its order requiring the party to attend and give evidence.

If no sufficient cause be shown, summons to issue.

Attendance of Witnesses and Consequence of Non-attendance.

123. Any person who shall be summoned to appear and give evidence in a cause shall be bound to attend at the time and place named for that purpose.

Persons summoned to give evidence must attend.

124. If any witness, on whom any summons to give evidence or produce a document shall have been served in either of the ways specified in Article 112 of this Chapter, shall, without lawful excuse, fail to comply with such summons, the Court may issue an order to the bailiff or other proper officer to apprehend and bring the witness before the Court. If any such person abscond or keep out of the way, so that he cannot be seized or brought before the Court, his property shall be liable to attachment and sale in the same manner as is provided in Article 116 of this Chapter, with respect to a witness on whom the service of a summons cannot be effected.

Consequences of non-attendance by a witness not a party to the suit.

125. If any witness, attending or being present in Court, shall, without lawful excuse, refuse to give evidence, or to subscribe his deposition as hereinafter required, or to produce any document in his custody or possession named in such summons as aforesaid, upon being required by the Court so to do, the Court may commit such witness to close custody for such reasonable time as it may deem proper, unless he shall, in the meantime, consent to give his evidence, or to sign his deposition, or to produce the document; after which, in the event of his persisting in his refusal, the Court may proceed to deal with him according to the provisions of Article 2 Chapter VI.

Consequences of refusal to give evidence.

126. If any person, being a party to the suit, who shall be ordered to attend to give evidence or produce a document shall, without lawful excuse, fail to comply with such order, or attending, or being present in Court, shall, without lawful excuse, refuse to give evidence, or to subscribe his deposition, or to produce any document in his custody or possession, named in such summons as aforesaid, upon being required by the Court so to do, the Court may either pass judgment against the party so failing or refusing, as in case of default, or give such other order in relation to the cause as the Court may deem proper in the circumstances of the case.

Consequence of non-attendance or refusal of a party.

127. Any person present in Court, whether a party or not, may be called upon by the Court to give evidence and to produce any document then and there in his actual possession or in his power, in the same manner and subject to the same rules as if he had been summoned to attend and give evidence, or to produce such document, and shall be liable to be dealt with by the Court as a party or witness, as the case may be, would, under any of the preceding provisions, be dealt with for any refusal to obey the order of the Court.

to a higher tribunal, the evidence of each witness given upon such examination shall be taken down in writing, by or in the presence and under the superintendence of the Judge, not ordinarily in the form of question and answer, but in that of a narrative, and, when completed, shall be read over to the witness, and signed by him in the presence of the Judge and of the parties to the suit, or their vakeels. In case the witness shall refuse to sign the deposition, the Judge shall sign the same, and record the reason, if any, given by the witness for such refusal, together with such remarks thereon as the Judge shall think fit to make. It shall be in the discretion of the Judge to take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question and answer, if there shall appear any special reason for so doing, or any party or his vakeel shall require it. If any question put to a witness be objected to by either of the parties or their vakeels, and the Court shall allow the same to be put, the question and answer shall be taken down, and the objection, and the name of the party making it, shall be noticed in taking down the depositions, together with the decision of the Court upon the objection The Judge shall also record such remarks as he may think material respecting the demeanor of the witness while under examination. In cases where an appeal does not lie to a higher tribunal, it shall not be necessary to take down the depositions of the witness in writing at length, but the Judge shall make a short memorandum of the substance of what each witness may have deposed at the trial of the cause, and such memorandum shall be written and signed with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

129. If a witness be about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or other good and sufficient cause can be shown to the satisfaction of the Court why his examination should be taken immediately, it shall be competent to the Court, upon the application of either party, at any time after summons issued, to take the examination of such witness forthwith, or on any day that may be fixed for that purpose, of which due notice shall be given to the other party if the day be fixed in his absence. The witness shall be examined, and his deposition shall be taken down in writing in the manner hereinafter prescribed; and the deposition so taken down may be read in evidence at the trial, or any hearing of the cause.

But a witness may for special cause be examined immediately.

131. When the evidence of a witness is required who is resident at some place distant more than a hundred miles from the place where the Court is held, or who is unable from sickness or infirmity to attend before the Judge to be personally examined, or is a person exempted by law absolutely, or at the discretion of the Court, by reason of rank, sex, or other special cause, from personal appearance in Court, the Court may, on the application of any of the parties to the suit, order a Commission to issue for the examination of the witness on interrogatories or otherwise, and may, by the same or any subsequent order or orders, give all such directions for taking such examinations, as well within the jurisdiction of the Court wherein the suit shall be pending as without, as may appear reasonable and just If the witness be resident within the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the Commission, the Commission may be issued to any officer of the Court, or to any subordinate Court, or to any other person or persons whom the Judge may think proper to appoint. If the witness be resident at some place which is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the Commission, and not within the local jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Supreme Court, but within its general jurisdiction, the Commission shall ordinarily be issued to the Court within whose particular jurisdiction the witness may reside, or which can most conveniently execute the same; but under special circumstances, which may appear to render a different course expedient, the Commission may be issued to any other person or persons whom the Court issuing the Commission may think proper to appoint.

Where the evidence is required of a witness who is resident at some place beyond the general jurisdiction of the Sudder Court, whether such place be within the said Presidency or within the territories in the possession of the East India Company or not, the application for a Commission to examine the witness must in all cases be made to the Sudder Court. If the suit in which the evidence of the witness is required be pending in some other Court than the Sudder Court, the application must be accompanied by a certificate from the Court in which the suit is pending, that the application is made with its permission. In all cases of an application to the Sudder Court for a Commission to examine a witness, the Commission may be issued to any person or persons whom the Sudder Court may think proper to appoint; and whenever a Commission is issued from the Sudder Court for examination of a witness in a suit pending in any other Court, the Commission shall be made returnable to the Court in which the suit is pending.

But no deposition taken under a Commission shall be read in evidence without the consent of the party against whom the same may be offered, unless it be proved that the deponent is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, or dead, or unable from sickness or infirmity to attend to be personally examined, or distant, without collusion, more than a hundred miles from the place where the Court is held, or exempted by law absolutely, or at the discretion of the Court, from personal appearance in Court, or unless the Court shall, at its discretion, dispense with the proof of any of the above circumstances, or shall authorize the deposition of any witness being read in evidence, notwithstanding proof that the causes for taking such deposition have ceased at the time of reading the same; and after the witness shall be produced, and shall have delivered his testimony, it shall be lawful for the Court, at its discretion, to authorize the reading of the deposition. And all depositions taken under any Commission which may be issued as aforesaid, being duly certified, may be read, at the discretion of the Court, without proof of the signature to such certificate.

When depositions may be read in evidence.

135. In suits regarding lands or houses, or their limits or boundaries, in which the Court may deem a local investigation to be requisite or proper, for the purpose of elucidating the matters in dispute, the Court may issue a Commission to any person whom it may think proper to appoint, directing him to make such investigation, and to report thereon to the Court. In all such cases, unless otherwise directed by the order of appointment, the Commissioner shall have power to examine, not only such witnesses as may be produced to him by the parties or any of them, but any other person or persons whom he may think proper to call upon to give evidence in the matters referred to him; and persons not attending on the requistion of the Commissioner, or refusing to give their testimony, or to sign their depositions, or being guilty of any contempt to the Commissioner during the investigation of the matters committed to him, shall be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties, and punishments, by orders made by the Commissioner, as they would incur for the same offences in suits tried before the Court; provided that the Commissioner shall report the order to the Court, and obtain its consent thereto, which is to be signified by the Judge's signing the order. The Commissioner shall, after such local inspection as he may deem necessary, and after reducing to writing, in the manner hereinbefore prescribed for taking the depositions of witnesses in the presence of the Judge, the depositions of such witnesses as he may have examined, shall return the depositions, together with his report in writing, subscribed with his name, to the Court issuing the Commission. The report and depositions shall be taken as evidence in the cause, and shall form part of the record; but it shall be competent to the Court, or to the parties or any of them, with the permission of the Court, to examine the Commissioner personally in open Court, touching any of the matters referred to him, or mentioned in his report, or the manner in which he may have conducted the investigation. The Court may order such sum to be paid to the Commissioner as may be thought reasonable for his trouble and expenses, and the sum so ordered to be paid shall be considered as costs in the cause, unless the Court shall otherwise direct.

136. In any suit or other judicial proceeding in which an investigation or adjustment of accounts may be necessary, it shall be lawful for the Judge to appoint any person whom he may think proper to be a Commissioner, for the purpose of making such investigation or adjustment, and to direct that the parties or their attorneys or vakeels shall attend upon the Commissioner during such investigation or adjustment. In all such cases the Judge shall furnish the Commissioner with such part of the proceedings and such detailed instructions as may appear necessary for his information and guidance; and the instructions shall distinctly specify whether the Commissioner is merely to transmit the proceedings which he may hold on the inquiry, or also to report his own opinion on the point referred for his investigation. The proceedings of the Commissioner are to be received in evidence in the case, unless the Judge may have reason to be dissatisfied with them; in which case he will make such further inquiry as may be requisite, and will pass such ultimate judgment or order as may appear to him to be right and proper in the circumstances of the case.

A Commissioner may be appointed to investigate and adjust accounts.

And if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Court that the land or other real or personal property so advertised to be sold in execution of the decree was not in the possession of the party against whom execution is sought, or of some other person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of ryots, or cultivators, or other persons paying rent to him at the time when the property was attached, or that being in the possession of the party himself at such time, it was so in his possession not on his own account or as his own property but on account of or in trust for some other person or persons, the Judge shall pass an order for releasing the said property from attachment. But if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Court that the land or other real or personal property advertised to be sold in execution of the decree was in possession of the party against whom execution is sought, as and for his own property, and not for or on account of any other person or persons, or was in the possession of some other person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of ryots, or cultivators, or other persons paying rent to him at the time when the property was attached, the Court shall pass an order disallowing the claim, and shall direct the decree to be executed. 31. The claim or objection shall in all cases be preferred or made at the earliest opportunity to the Court that shall have ordered the attachment; and if the property to which the claim or objection applies shall have been advertised for sale, the sale may (if it appears necessary) be postponed for the purpose of making the investigation mentioned in the last preceding Article; provided that, if it shall appear that the preferring or making the claim or objection has been designedly and unnecessarily delayed, with a view to obstruct the ends of justice, the sale shall not be postponed, and the claimant shall be left to prosecute his claim after the sale by a regular suit.

Claims and objections should be preferred at the earliest opportunity.

The sale, if not objected to for irregularity, or if the objection is disallowed, shall become absolute.

36. If no such application as is mentioned in the last preceding Article be made within one month after the sale, or if such application shall be made and the objection shall be disallowed, the Judge shall pass an order confirming the sale; and in like manner, if such application shall be made, and if the objection be allowed, the Judge shall pass an order setting aside the sale for irregularity. If guilty of fraud or concealment, debtor's imprisonment may be extended to two years; and he may be further dealt with criminally on account of his fraud.

Punishment may be remitted on submission of the offender.

Chapter VII.

REFERENCE TO ARBITRATION.

Reference on application of the parties.

1. If the parties to a suit are desirous that the matters in difference between them shall be referred to the final decision of one or more arbitrator or arbitrators, they may apply to the Court at any time before final judgment for an order of reference.

Application how to be made.

2. The application shall be made by the parties in person, or through one of the vakeels of the Court, specially authorized in that behalf by an instrument in writing, which shall be presented to the Judge at the time of making the application, and shall be filed with the proceedings in the cause.

Appointment of arbitrators may be made by Court at the desire of parties.

3. If the parties cannot agree with respect to the arbitrator or arbitrators, or if the person or persons nominated by them shall refuse to accept the arbitration, or having accepted it shall refuse to act, and the parties are desirous that the nomination shall be made by the Court, the Court shall appoint some proper person or persons to be the arbitrator or arbitrators, as the case may be.

Order of reference.

4. The Court shall fix such time as it may think reasonable for the delivery of the award, and shall by an order under its seal, in which the time so fixed shall be specified, refer to the arbitrator or arbitrators the matters in difference in the suit between the parties.

When the reference is to two or more, the order shall provide for difference of opinion.

5. If the reference be to two or more arbitrators, provision shall be made in the order for a difference of opinion among the arbitrators, by the appointment of an umpire, or by declaring that the decision shall be with the majority, or by empowering the arbitrators to appoint their own umpire, or otherwise as may be agreed upon between the parties; or if they cannot agree as to any of these particulars, as the Court itself may determine.

Power to Court to direct arbitration.

6. If on the day mentioned in the summons or at any subsequent hearing of the cause it shall appear to the Judge that the matter in dispute between the parties consists wholly or in part of matters of mere account which cannot conveniently be tried before him, it shall be lawful for him, at his discretion, to order that such matter of account be referred to an arbitrator appointed by the parties, or to an officer of Court, or to some other proper person whom the Judge may think fit to appoint, upon such terms as to costs and the remuneration of the arbitrator, or otherwise, as the Judge shall think reasonable.

Court may determine particular facts or points of law.

7. If it shall appear to the Judge that the allowance or disallowance of any particular item or items in such account depends upon a question of law or fact fit to be decided by the Court, it shall be lawful for the Judge to decide such question of law or fact, and his decision thereupon shall be taken and acted upon by the arbitrator as conclusive.

If action be commenced by one party to a deed of arbitration, Court may stay proceedings.

8. Whenever the parties to any deed or instrument in writing shall agree that any then existing or future differences between them or any of them shall be referred to arbitration, and any one or more of the parties so agreeing, or any person claiming through or under him or them, shall nevertheless commence any suit against the other party or parties, or against any person or persons claiming through or under him or them, in respect of the matters so agreed to be referred or any of them, it shall be lawful to the Court in which the suit is brought on application by the defendant or defendants at his or their first appearance before the Judge, in obedience to any summons that may be issued in such suit, upon being satisfied that no sufficient reason exists why such matters cannot be or ought not to be referred to arbitration according to such agreement as aforesaid, and that the defendant was at the time of the commencement of such suit and still is ready and willing to join and concur it all acts necessary and proper for causing such matters so to be decided by arbitration, to make an order for staying all proceedings in such suit, on such terms as to costs or otherwise as to such Court may seem fit: provided always, that any such order may at any time thereafter be discharged or varied as justice may require.

Powers of arbitrators.

9. Upon any reference by an order of Court, whether compulsory or by consent, the arbitrator or arbitrators and umpire shall have all the like powers as the Court would have in the like circumstances; and the Court shall issue the same processes to the parties and witnesses whom the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, or the parties, may desire to have examined, as the Court is authorized to issue in causes tried before it; and persons not attending in consequence of such process, or making any default, or refusing to give their testimony, or to sign their depositions, or being guilty of any contempt to the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, during the investigation of the suit, shall be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties, and punishments, by orders made by the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, as they would incur for the same offences in suits tried before the Court; provided that the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, shall report the order, with the reason for making it, to the Court, and obtain its consent thereto, which is to be signified by the Judge's signing the order.

Extension of time for making award

10. In cases where the arbitrators or umpire shall not have been able to complete the award within the period specified in the order from want of the necessary evidence or information, or other good and sufficient cause, the Court may from time to time enlarge the period for the delivery of the award if it shall think proper. In any case in which an umpire shall have been appointed it shall be lawful for him to enter on the reference in lieu of the arbitrators, if they shall have allowed their time or their extended time to expire without making an award, or shall have delivered to any party or to the umpire a notice in writing stating that they cannot agree.

In case of death, incapacity, or refusal to act of arbitrators or umpire, Court may appoint others instead.

11. If, in any case of reference to arbitration by an order of Court, the appointed arbitrator or arbitrators or umpire shall die, or refuse, or become incapable to act, it shall be lawful for the Court, on the application of the parties, or any of them, to appoint a new arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, in the place or stead of the person or persons so dying, or refusing or becoming incapable to act; and where two arbitrators are at liberty by the terms of the order of reference to appoint an umpire and do not appoint an umpire, then and in every such instance any of the parties may serve the arbitrators with a written notice to appoint an umpire; and if within seven clear days after such notice shall have been served no umpire be appointed, it shall be lawful for the Court upon the application of the party having served such notice as aforesaid, upon proof to its satisfaction of such notice having been served, to appoint an umpire. In any case of appointment under this Article, the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire so appointed, shall have the like power to act in the reference, as if their name or names had been inserted in the original order of reference.

Award how to be submitted to Court.

12. When a final award in a cause shall be made, either by the arbitrators or umpire, it shall be submitted to the Court under the signature of the person or persons by whom it may be made, together with all the proceedings, depositions, and exhibits in the cause.

Arbitrator may state special case.

13. It shall be lawful for the arbitrator or arbitrators and umpire, upon any reference, by an order of Court, whether compulsory or by consent of parties, if he or they shall think fit, and if it is not provided to the contrary, to state his or their award as to the whole or any part thereof in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court.

Power to send back to arbitrator.

14. In any case where reference shall be made to arbitration as aforesaid, the Court shall have power at any time and from time to time to remit the matters referred, or any or either of them, to the re-consideration and re-determination of the same arbitrator or arbitrators or umpire, upon such terms as to costs and otherwise as to the said Court may seem proper.

Judgment to be pronounced in terms of the award.

15. If the Court shall not see cause to remit the matters referred for re-consideration in manner aforesaid, it shall pronounce judgment conformable to the award, unless the same shall be set aside, or to its own opinion on the special case if the award shall have been submitted to it in the form of a special case, and the decree shall be carried into execution in the same manner as other decrees of the Court.

Application to set aside the award.

16. All applications to set aside any award made on a compulsory reference or a reference by consent of the parties, shall be made within ten days after the same has been submitted to the Court; and if no such application is made, or if no rule is granted thereon, or if any rule granted thereon is afterwards discharged, judgment shall be pronounced as mentioned in the last preceding Article, and such judgment shall be final between the parties.

Chapter VIII.

Where the agreement is for the delivery of some property, moveable or immoveable, or for the doing or performing, or the refraining to do or perform any particular act or acts, the estimated value of the property to be delivered, or to which the act or acts specified may have reference, shall be stated in the agreement.

The agreement to be filed and numbered as a cause.

2. The agreement may be filed in any Court having jurisdiction in the matter, with the proper officer, and when so filed shall be numbered and registered as a cause between some or one of the parties interested, or claiming to the interested as plaintiffs or plaintiff, and the others or other of them as defendants or defendant; but it shall not be necessary to issue any process for summoning the defendant.

Parties to be subject to the Court's jurisdiction.

3. After the agreement shall have been filed, all the parties thereto shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, and shall be bound by the statements therein.

4. The case shall be set down for hearing as an ordinary suit; and if the Judge shall be satisfied, after an examination of the parties or their vakeels, or taking such evidence as he may deem proper, that the agreement was duly executed by the parties, and that they have a bonâ fide interest in the question or questions of fact or of law or equity stated therein, and that the same is or are fit to be tried or decided, he shall proceed to record and try, or hear the same, and deliver his finding or opinion thereon, in the same way as in an ordinary suit; and shall, upon his finding or deciding upon the question or questions of fact or of law or equity, give judgment for the sum fixed by the parties, or so ascertained as aforesaid, or otherwise, according to the terms of the agreement; and upon the judgment which shall be so given, decree shall follow, and may be executed in the same may as if the judgment had been pronounced in a contested suit.

Of Special Cases for the Opinion of the Sudder Court.

Persons interested or claiming to be interested in any question as to the construction of any Act of Parliament, or any Regulation of the Bengal Code, or Act of the Council of India, will, deed, or other instrument in writing, or any article, clause, matter, or thing therein contained, or as to the title or evidence of title to any real or personal estate contracted to be sold or otherwise dealt with, or as to the parties to or the form of any deed or instrument for carrying any such contract into effect, or as to any other matter, or thing, may, with the consent of a Judge of the Sudder Court, concur in stating the same in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court; and all executors, administrators, and trustees may concur in such case.

What it is to contain.

6. Every such special case shall concisely state such facts and documents as may be necessary to enable the Court to decide the question raised thereby, and shall be signed by the parties or their vakeels.

To be filed and numbered as a cause.

7. The special case shall be filed with the proper officer of the Court, and shall be numbered and registered as a cause between some or one of the parties interested or claiming to be interested as plaintiffs or plaintiff, and the others or other of them as defendants or defendant; but it shall not be necessary to issue any process for summoning the defendants or defendant.

Hearing and disposal of the case.

9. The special case shall be set down for hearing as an ordinary suit, and the Court, after hearing the parties or their vakeels, shall proceed to determine the questions raised therein, or any of them, and to declare its opinion thereon, and, so far as the case shall admit of the same, upon the right involved therein, without proceeding to administer any relief consequent upon such declaration; and every such declaration of the Court shall have the same force and effect as such declaration would have had, and shall be as binding to the same extent as such declaration would have been, if contained in a judgment pronounced in a contested suit. Provided that, if upon the hearing of such special case as aforesaid, the Court shall be of opinion that the questions raised thereby, or any of them, cannot properly be decided upon such case, the Court may refuse to decide the same.

Chapter IX.

Appeals from Final Decrees.

In what cases appeals shall lie from decisions of Judges, Principal Sudder Ameens, and Moonsiffs.

1. An appeal shall lie, as herein-after provided, from the decisions of the Judge, the Principal Sudder Ameen, and of the Moonsiff, in all suits in which the property, or possession, or right of occupany of land or other real property, or the right to receive rent or profit issuing out of land or other real property, or the right to hold land or other real property exempt from the payment of rent or revenue, or any thing in the nature thereof, or the right to hold land or other real property subject to the payment of a fixed annual sum on account of rent or revenue, or anything in the nature thereof, or the right to any benefits, liberties, or privileges derived out of or affecting any landed or other real property, or the right to receive or collect any customary or other payments or gratuities on any account whatsoever, or the title to any office, or to any trust or special privileges, or to any toll, fair, market, or franchise, or anything in the nature thereof respectively, shall be in question; and in all suits in which the right of inheritance from, or succession to, any person or the validity of any marriage, divorce, will, or authority to adopt, or of any decree, bequest, or limitation under any will or settlement, or the condition or status of any person, in respect of relationship, religion, caste, or otherwise, or the custody or guardianship of any person, may be disputed; and in all suits for any malicious prosecution, or for any libel or slander, or for criminal conversation, or for seduction, or for breach of promise of marriage.

The decision of the Zillah Judge in appeal is final.

4. The decision of the Judge in appeals from the decision of the Principal Sudder Ameen, or Moonsiff, shall be final; provided, however, that it shall be competent to the Judge, at the time of deciding an appeal from the judgment of a Principal Sudder Ameen or Moonsiff, to record his opinion, certifying in his judgment his reasons for the same, that the case is one for revision by the Sudder Court, and when he shall have so certified, the Sudder Court shall admit a special appeal from the decision of the Zillah Judge, in the event of either of the parties making application to that effect.

In original suits the appeal from the Zillah Judge shall be to the Sudder Court.

5. The appeal from the decisions of the Judge, in original suits, shall be to the Sudder Court.

How Appeals are to be preferred.

Appeal to be preferred by a memorandum to be filed within specified time.

6. The appeal shall be made in the form of a memorandum as herein-after prescribed, which may be presented in the Appellate Court, or in the Court in which the decision objected to was passed for transmission to the Appellate Court. In either case, the memorandum must be presented within the times herein-after specified, unless the appellant shall, by a petition to the Appellate Court, show sufficient cause for not having presented it within such limited periods; that is to say, within thirty-one days if the appeal be to the Zillah Judge, or be to the Sudder Court from a decision of a Court of original jurisdiction constituted by one or more of its own Judges, and within ninety-one days if the appeal be to the Sudder Court from the decision of a Zillah Judge, Principal Sudder Ameen, or Moonsiff; the days to be reckoned in all the cases as immediately following and exclusive of the day on which judgment was pronounced.

Time may be extended by an application.

7. An application for an extension of the time for presenting a memorandum of appeal may be made directly to the Appellate Court, or through the intervention of the Lower Court, at the option of the applicant. If the application for extension of time be made to the Lower Court, that Court shall record the reasons assigned for the application, and shall transmit a copy of its proceedings to the Appellate Court.

What the memorandum is to contain.

8. Every memorandum of appeal shall set forth concisely, and under distinct heads, grounds of objection to the decision appealed against, without any argument or narrative, and such grounds shall be numbered consecutively. But the appellant shall not be tied down to the objections set forth by him in his memorandum of appeal.

Form of memorandum.

The memorandum of appeal shall be in the following form, or to the following effect:—

10. Within one month from the date on which the memorandum of appeal shall be presented in the Lower Court, or one month from the date on which intimation shall be received by the Lower Court from the Appellate Court, that the memorandum of appeal has been presented in the Appellate Court, unless the Appellate Court shall think proper to enlarge the time, and then within such enlarged time, the Judge of the Lower Court shall, except as provided in the next succeeding Article, certify under his hand and the seal of his Court the record duly made up and authenticated, including authenticated copies of all his own material proceedings in the cause, and the original depositions, exhibits, and every original paper read in the cause, together with the written statements, if any, that may have been presented by the parties, or any of them, and received and recorded by the Judge, and shall transmit the record so made up to the Appellate Court. Previous to transmitting the above-mentioned papers to the Appellate Court the Judge of the Lower Court shall cause true and faithful copies of all the originals to be made out and authenticated by the proper officer of his Court, and deposited in the Court in lieu of the originals. The copies shall be records of the Court, and shall be received in evidence in any other Court in the same way as originals. In cases where any original deposition or other original proceedings or matter whatsoever shall have been previously entered in a book, which may likewise contain other proceedings in other distinct cases, or any other matter, so that such original papers cannot be transmitted to the Appellate Court without the other proceedings or matters, the Judge of the Lower Court, within the time and in the manner before directed, shall certify a true and authentic copy of such original papers, and that the original of each copy so transmitted is entered in such book. In cases where any original paper shall have been mislaid or lost, and a copy of it shall have been entered in any book or proceedings of the Court, the copy shall have the force and effect of the original, and the Judge shall transmit a copy of it to the Appellate Court, and shall in like manner certify that the original, after due search, cannot be found. A memorandum of all expenses which may be incurred in the preparation of copies of papers or otherwise, in or about the making up and transmitting the record, shall be forwarded therewith to the Appellate Court, and shall be considered costs in the cause.

11. In appeal from the Principal Sudder Ameen and Moonsiff to the Zillah Judge, the proper officer shall attend in the Appellate Court, from time to time, as may be required, with the original record of the proceedings in the cause.

Of staying and executing Decrees under Appeal.

When and on what terms execution of decree may be stayed.

12. When any party or parties appealing is or are directed to pay any sum of money, or to perform any duty, or when the decree is for the possession of land or any other property, real or personal, the Court whose judgment is appealed from shall and is hereby empowered to award that its judgment shall be carried into execution, or that sufficient security shall be given for the performance of such judgment; provided always, that where the Court of original jurisdiction shall think fit to order the judgment to be executed, security shall be taken from the other party or parties for the due performance of such order or judgment as may be passed in the Court of Appeal. But this decision shall itself be subject to appeal.

Of Procedure in Appeals from final Decrees.

How the appeal is to be entered.

13. When a memorandum of appeal shall have been presented in or transmitted to an Appellate Court, the clerk (or proper officer) of the Appellate Court shall endorse thereon the date of presentment if it was presented in the Appellate Court, or the date of receipt if it was transmitted from the Lower Court, and shall register the appeal in a book to be kept for the purpose, and called the Register of Appeals.

Form of the register.

14. The Register shall be kept in the form contained in the Schedule (B.) hereunto annexed; and a certified copy of the Register, under the seal of the Court, shall be received in evidence in all Courts of Justice in India.

Court of Appeal may, at its discretion, require security for costs from appellant.

15. It shall not be necessary in any Court of Appeal to take any security for costs, but it shall be in the discretion of every such Court of Appeal to demand security for costs from the appellant or not, as it shall see fit, before the respondent is called upon to answer.

Day to be fixed for hearing the appeal.

16. A day shall be fixed by the Appellate Court for the hearing and disposal of the appeal; which day shall not be earlier, in cases in which a record of the suit shall be transmitted by the Lower Court, than forty-two days from the day on which the record may have been received in the Appellate Court, and shall not be earlier, in cases appealable to the Sudder Court, when the officer is required to attend the Appellate Court with the original record of the suit, than twenty-one days from the presentment of the memorandum of appeal, but shall otherwise be as early, in all cases, as can be conveniently fixed, with a due regard to the state of business in the Court; the days to be reckoned in all the cases as exclusive of the day of hearing, and of the day on which the record may have been received, or the memorandum of appeal presented in the Appellate Court. Notice of the day which has been fixed for the hearing of the appeal shall be sent by the proper officer of the Appellate Court to the proper officer of the Lower Court from the decree of which the appeal has been preferred, and shall be served on the appellant and respondent, in the same way as hereinbefore provided for in respect to the service of a summons. The notice to the appellant shall contain an additional intimation, that if he does not appear in the Appellate Court on the day so fixed for the hearing of the appeal, either in person or by an advocate, attorney, or vakeel of the Appellate Court, his appeal will be dismissed for want of prosecution. And the notice to the respondent shall contain an intimation, that if he does not appear in the Appellate Court on the day so fixed for the hearing of the appeal, the case will be heard and decided ex parte in his absence.

The parties to be in attendance on day so fixed.

17. On the day in that behalf mentioned in the notices, and unless the Court shall otherwise direct, from day to day, until the cause is called on, the parties, appellant and respondent, shall be in attendance in the Appellate Court, in person or by an advocate, attorney, or vakeel of the Court, duly empowered in manner hereinbefore mentioned, to represent them in all matters relating to the prosecution or defence of the appeal.

18. If on the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal, or on any other day subsequent thereto on which the cause may be called on, the appellant shall not appear in person, or by an advocate, attorney, or vakeel of the Court, the appeal shall be dismissed for default. If the appellant appears in person, or by advocate, attorney, or vakeel, and the respondent shall not appear in person, or by advocate, attorney, or vakeel, the appeal shall be heard ex-parte in his absence.

Consequences of non-appearance.

19. Where an appeal is dismissed for default, an intimation of the dismissal shall be sent to the Court of original jurisdiction, and the costs of preparing copies of papers, and making up and transmitting the record, may be realized from the appellant, under an order of that Court, to be enforced in the same manner as a decree of Court.

When an appeal is dismissed, intimation to be sent to the Lower Court.

20. In all cases in which an appeal shall be dismissed for default of prosecution, it shall be competent to the appellant to apply within reasonable time to the Appellate Court, for the re-admission of his appeal. The application shall be accompanied with a certificate from the Court of original jurisdiction, that the costs mentioned in the preceding Article, when ordered to be realized from the appellant, have been fully paid and satisfied; and if the Appellate Court shall think proper to grant such application, a day shall be thereupon fixed for the hearing of the appeal, and a fresh notice shall be issued to the respondent, to be served in the same way as the first notice, and with the like additional intimation as is herein-before provided; but it shall not be necessary to issue or serve any notice on the appellant.

How an appeal dismissed for default may be restored.

21. The Appellate Court, after hearing the cause, shall proceed to give its judgment in the same manner as herein-before prescribed in regard to the judgment of Courts of original jurisdiction, for confirming, or reversing, or modifying and altering the decree of the Lower Court, as the Appellate Court shall think proper.

22. No decision shall be reversed or altered, nor shall any case be referred back to the Court of original jurisdiction, on account of any error, defect, or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case.

No decision to be reversed for irregularity.

23. If the Court of original jurisdiction shall have disposed of the case upon any preliminary point so as to exclude any evidence of fact which shall appear to the Court of Appeal essential to the rights of the parties, and the decree of the Lower Court shall be reversed by the decree in appeal, the Appellate Court may, if it think right, remit the case to the Lower Court, and cause the papers in the suit, together with a copy of the decree in appeal, to be transmitted to such Lower Court, with directions to proceed in the investigation of the merits of the case, and pass a decree therein.

When a case may be remanded by Appellate Court.

24. It shall not be competent to the Appellate Court to remand a case for a second decision by the Court of original jurisdiction, except as provided in the preceding Article.

Power to remand limited as above.

25. When there is sufficient evidence upon the record of the Lower Court to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce a satisfactory judgment, the Appellate Court shall finally determine the case, notwithstanding that the judgment of the Lower Court has proceeded wholly upon some other ground

When the Appellate Court may dispose of a case, though the Lower Court has decided on other grounds.

26. It shall not be competent to the parties in an appeal to produce additional evidence, whether of exhibits or witnesses; but if it appears that the Lower Court refused to admit competent evidence, or if the Appellate Court itself requires the production of exhibits or witnesses, as necessary to enable it to pronounce a satisfactory judgment, or if any other substantial cause demands a deviation from the ordinary rule, the Court may allow additional exhibits to be received, and the same and other witnesses to be examined; provided that whenever this power is exercised, the reasons for exercising it be recorded on the proceedings by the Appellate Court.

When the Appellate Court may call for fresh evidence.

27. Whenever additional evidence is permitted to be received, it shall be competent to the Court of Appeal to take such evidence before itself, or to require the Lower, or any other Court, or to empower any person, to take such evidence, and it shall also be competent to the Court of Appeal to prescribe the mode by which such evidence shall be taken; and the Court of Appeal shall be at liberty to proceed by all or any of the modes aforesaid.

How additional evidence is to be taken.

28. In all cases where additional evidence is permitted to be taken, the Court shall define the point or points to which the evidence is to be confined, and record the same in the minutes of the proceedings.

Points to be defined.
